SMITH PLANE LANDS IN SEA

Outlook Brighter For Success of Naval Parley

JINX RIDES WITH CIVILIAN AVIATORS TODAY

RADIOS RECEIVED THAT "CITY OF OAKLAND" RAN OUT OF GASOLINE

FLIERS LAND IN WATER 500 MILES OFF HAWAIIAN COAST

(Special by telephone to Dispatch)

Honolulu, 4 P. M. (Central time)—The lost trans-Pacific fliers Smith and Bronte, are reported landing safely on Molkai Island, southeast of Oahu, according to advices received here today from Judge MacCorrison of Keawanui Island.

San Francsico, July 15.—The Pacific has scored the challenge of two daring airmen and drawn them into its vastness where foreboding silence shrouded their fate.

At the hour today when they would have received a world's plaudits had their effort been successful, Ernest Smith and Emory Bronte were bobbing on a shark-infested sea cut off from communication with radio stations which had received the hourly story of their flight from Golden Gate.

This version of their fate was based on presumption. At 8:15 A. M., Pacific coast time, they made their last contact with civilization. They wirelessed to the steamship Wilhelmina, 75 miles distant:

"Landing on sea. Using rubber lifeboats."

Two hours and fifteen minutes had elapsed since the message was heard. It was feared that the plane had gone down on the sea and its radio was out of commission. In event of a forced descent, ships hurrying to the rescue hoped that the fliers would be able to abandon the plane for their frail but serviceable rubber lifeboat.

The steamers Wihelmina and Calawaii, both approximately 75 miles distant and the station tender U. S. Pelican, were speeding to the spot approximately 674 miles off the Island of Maui, where the "City of Oakland" last reported its position.

A message from the Wilhelmina at 10:35 A. M., coast time, said the vessel expected to reach Smith's position at 2 P. M., coast time.

The message to station KHK, Wahaiwa, Island Oahu, intercepted here by navy radio, said:

"Proceeding full speed Smith's position. Expect arrive 11:15 A. M., Honolulu time. Sea calm. Rescue conditions most favorable."

The monoplane was approximately 1708 miles toward Honolulu, its goal, when its first calls for help were heard at 5:45 A. M., Pacific coast time. Bronte, operating the radio, said their gasoline was low and the ship was in danger of going down.

The plane held steadily to its course until its gasoline was drained. It went down, as nearly as could be determined, at 8:15 A. M. Pacific coast time.

This was 21 hours and 36 minutes after the flight began—three and one-half hours before they had hoped to be in Honolulu.

If the ships now steaming full speed toward the spot fail to find the men, the army's great monoplane "Bird of Paradise" which completed the only trans-Pacific flight in aviation history, will look for them.

The Fokker, which flew to Wheeler Field, Honolulu, with Lieutenants Lester J. Maitland and Albert F. Hegenberger, was conditioned for a ten-hour flight.

If ordered to search, it will be commanded by Captain Lowell Smith, one of the army's around-the-world fliers.

Smith's defeat was the climax of a string of three accidents. Two times before his take-off yesterday he tried to leave for Hawaii.

The first time, June 28, he hoped to race the "Bird of Paradise" to a common goal. He was forced back when a wind deflector cracked.

The second set back came yesterday when on an early take-off his plane tipped to its side in avoiding a rut. Wrecking of the left wing was narrowly averted.

Despite the jinx which seemed to follow every gesture toward a trans-Pacific flight, he held steadily to his purpose of being the first civilian to complete the undertaking.

Bronte, obtained as a navigator after the first attempted take-off, increased Smith's confidence. He is a skilled navigator and holds a license as a ship's master.

At Wheeler Field, Honolulu, pursuit planes were being placed in readiness to assist the "Bird of Paradise" in a possible search.

It was believed likely that the navy would dispatch faster boats than the Pelican to the sea off Maui if the steamship's search is unsuccessful.

Honolulu, T. H., July 15.—Grave fears for the safety of Ernest Smith and Emory Bronte were expressed by Captain Henry Nelson of the liner President Pierce on its arrival today.

Rough seas were encountered by the vessel in the vicinity where the "City of Oakland" bearing Smith and Bronte was forced down.

The steamer Wilhelmina just before 10 A. M., was reported still in full steam toward the position last reported by the airmen.

No further word had been received from the plane since it was believed to have dropped into the sea shortly after 5 A. M., Honolulu time.

San Francisco, Cal., July 15. — Jinx rode the wings of the "City of Oakland" to heart-breaking defeat.

With their goal almost at hand, Ernest Smith and Emory Bronte flashed that they were landing in the water because their gasoline was insufficient to carry them an estimated 500 mies to the Island of Maui.

It meant apparent failure for Smith's third trans-Pacific flight attempt. His first two efforts resulted in false starts.

"My God, I hope they make it," Anthony Parente, chief flight backer, said.

He said he could not believe that the plane had run out of gasoline. It was fueled with 367 gallons before its take-off yesterday at 10:39 A. M.

Its consumption would have been 12 gallons an hour if estimates by mechanics proved correct.

It would have consumed approximately 228 gallons, according to these estimates, having been in the air 19 hours and six minutes when first calls for help were heard.

It was not known whether Smith's last message indicated that he at that moment was landing on the water.

It was believed possible that it might have been intended as confirmation of his inability to continue and that he would land at the moment his gasoline ran out completely.

Navy officials here announced after it seemed probable Smith's plane had gon down on the water:

"According to our figures the plane should have landed in the water 1620 nautical miles (1899 land miles) frmo San Francisco and 720 nautical miles (840 land miles) from Honolulu.

"The air line distance is 2140 (2495 land miles) and they are a little out of the airline course."

The airline distance given by the navy differs from that given by the United States hydrographic office, which is 2408 and miles.

The army radio station at the Presidio reported messages from the Wilhelmina saying the vessel was about 75 miles from where the plane was believed to have gone down. It would require either the Wilhelmina or the Calawaii, the vessels believed in nearest proximity to the plane, approximately four hours to reach the position given, it was estimated.

Riotous Mob Refusing to Disperse Is Fired On by Vienna Police, Casualties Unknown

RETALIATING, MOB SETS FIRE TO COURTHOUSE

REMOVES DOCUMENTS FROM THE MINISTRY OF JUSTICE

By ROBERT H. BEST
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Vienna, July 15.—A riotous mob gathered today on Schmerling Square in front of the Palace of Justice and when it refused to disperse police fired 20 rounds of ammunition.

The exact number of casualties was not at first learned.

In retaliation the rioters removed documents from the ministry of justice and set fire to the courthouse.

They then took up positions preventing firemen from approaching the blazing building.

At 1:10 P. M., the mezzanine on the first floor was burning.

Rioting spread to other sections of the city and the situation became most serious.

In Lichtenfels Street, socialists said, someone shot from a window and wounded a worker who fell unconscious.

A crowd gathered immediately and stormed the house seeking to hang the assailant to a lamppost. He was saved only by arrival of socialist guards.

Throughout Vienna cries of "Revolution! Revolution" were audible.

Part of the increasing crowd attempted without success to set fire to a police station near the city hall.

Others raided the plants of the clerical, conservative newspaper Reichsport, which is the chief supporter of Premier Seipel and the Wiener Neuste Nachrichten, organ of the Gross-Deutsche party.

Vienna, July 15. — A leaderless, surging mob rioted near the parliament buildings today, set fire to the courthouse after destroying records of the ministry of justice and inspired revolutionary scenes.

Fresh shooting by police broke out at 10:45 P. M., near the Burgh Theatre and city hall.

The mob was panic-stricken.

Accurate information on the number of fatailitiet was impossible to obtain. One report, unconfirmed, said six persons had been killed.

At 2:15 P. M., after leading socialists had been unable to quell the disturbance, police turned machine guns on the rioters.

More than 100 injured men were reported lying on the floor of the city hall, which took on the aspect of a field hospital.

At 2:15 P. M. riot guns were issued to police reserves.

The military, wearing war equipment of steel helmets, placed their machine guns in a street adjacent to parliament and fired into the crowd.

The mob took refuge behind adjoining buildings.

The first outbreak between socialists and anti-socialists, who have been at odds ever since the war, came yesterday in a minor clash resulting from the acquittal of three fascists accused of murder.

Joseph and Hieronymus Tscharmann and Johann Pinter, who on Jan. 30 were alleged to have killed a man and child and wounded five others in the village of Schattendorf, were freed by a jury.

Feeling against the ministry of justice flourished in the working classes. There were mutters that trouble would develop today.

At 9 A. M., hundreds of workmen lay down their tools and marched to the city hall.

Angry cries of "revenge against the fascists" went up and the mob continued to gain in numbers.

There was no stopping the onrush.

The crowd stormed the Palace of Justice, one of the parliament buildings near the heart of the city, and seized documents which they burned.

They then set fire to the building and prevented firemen from approaching.

Police fired desultorily but the crowd held on and even cut the fire hose to keep the blaze raging in the court house.

Meanwhile cries of "revolution" were heard in various parts of the city. Police saved one householder from being the victim of a mob.

Leading socialists came before the crowd and pleaded for order.

They were met with cries of:

"Traitors! Now our day has come! You have cold feet!"

Groups attacked a police station and turned on newspaper offices.

The mob then gathered in front of the city hall.

The rioting took place near the opera, only a block or so away from the Imperial Hotel, where many American tourists are stopping.

LINER RAMS AND SINKS FREIGHTER OFF NANTUCKET

New York, July 15.—(UP)—The Holland-America liner Veendam rammed and sank the freighter Sagaland four miles off Nantucket today, the officers of the Holland-American line here were advised by wireless by the master of the Veendam.

All of the Sagaland's crew of approximately 25 were saved except one man, the message said.

INDIANA EDITOR GAINS CLEMENCY

GOV. ED. JACKSON PAROLES GEORGE DALE FOR CONTEMPT OF COURT

Indianapolis, Ind., July 15.—(UP)—Gov. Ed. Jackson of Indiana today extended executive clemency to George Dale, editor of the Muncie, Ind., Post-Democrat, announcing that Dale would be paroled from his ninety-day term, for contempt of court.

Gov. Jackson announced that the trustees of the Indiana State Farm at Putnamville after a hearing Wednesday had recommended that Dale be paroled "under the usual conditions, without remission of fine" and that he would carry out the recommendations.

Publication of articles in his newspaper brought Dale before Judge Clarence Dearth of Muncie for contempt of court. He was sentenced to ninety days for criticizing the methods of the Muncie jurist.

Dale, however started a fight for freedom. Successive appeals to the Indiana state supreme court and the United States supreme court were taken.

Both appeals failed. The state supreme court ruled that "the truth is no defense" in a contempt action. The United States supreme court refused to review the case, and sent it back to the Indiana tribunal.

Denial of the appeal was to have been certified by the Indiana court early next week. Without parole, Dale then would have been forced to serve his sentence.

B. O. JOHNSON FIRST ASSISTANT OF PRES. DONNELLY

St. Paul, July 15.—(UP)—Charles Donnelly, president of the Northern Pacific railway, today appointed B. O. Johnson, who has been with the road for 27 years, as his first assistant.

Johnson will succeed R. W. Clark, who was named general traffic manager.

F. E. Williamson will succeed Johnson as assistant to the operating vice president of the company.

The changes will become effective Saturday.

DEATH CLAIMS ITS STAKES TODAY, 3 ARE HANGED

TORREZ, STALESKY AND DUSCHOWSKI MEET DOOM AT JOLIET

ARE CONVICTED OF MURDERING DEPUTY WARDEN PETER M. KLEIN

By MAX BUCKINGHAM
United Press Staff Correspondent

Death Chamber, Will County Jail, Joliet, Ill., July 15.—Death claimed its stakes today in the daring gamble three men made to escape the punishment for murder.

At 6:14 a. m. Roberto Torrez, Charles Duschkowski, and Walter Stalesky were hanged simultaneously from the same gallows, paying the state of Illinois the supreme penalty for murdering Deputy Warden Peter M. Klein in their escape from the state penitentiary in May, 1926.

The three were originally sentenced to life terms in the state penitentiary for murder. With four other "lifers" they plotted to win their freedom at the expense of slaying Warden Klein.

They were caught, convicted of Klein's murder, and sentenced to die. Twice more they attempted to evade justice by breaking jail and twice more they were recaptured. Today they were hanged and death had won.

Two of their original comrades in Klein's murder have been killed by officers who ran them down. Only two of the original seven actually escaped and have yet to pay the penalty.

The three men went to their death smiling. As they walked out of the quaint little, red brick jail into the daylight of the jail yard where the scaffold awaited them, they were greeted by a crowd of more than 1,000 persons who had gathered to witness the spectacle of a triple execution. Many more waited outside on the streets, denied admission to the death chamber.

But the doomed prisoners appeared unafraid. They grinned at those who had come to watch them die.

Torrez, the little Mexican songbird who sang "La Paloma" hours at a stretch last winter to drown out the sawing of iron bars by his comrades; Torrez, the most colorful of all the men, shrugged his shoulders as he walked down the lane that was opened for him and shouted a good-bye to a few deputies whom he recognized in the throng.

Shortly after 6 a. m. the procession from the jail started. Sheriff Albert E. Markgraf led the way. He was followed by four priests, including a former Franciscan monk. Then came the prisoners—Torrez in the lead.

Torrez wore a white shirt, blue trousers, and house slippers and his mates were similarly clad.

A heavy fog hung low over the jail yard, but the high scaffold stood out plainly, showing the three nooses hanging limply at their places.

As the three men ascended the scaffold, the priests offered them the last sacraments. But Duschkowski, with the same sneering bravado that he has shown throughout his captivity, turned away. He chose instead to smile down at the throng gathered below him and then up to the loose hemp that dangled just above his head. He seemed to examine it closely with interest.

Duschkowski was first to feel the hemp about his throat. Stalesky was second and finally the noose was adjusted on Torrez.

The long white robes next were fitted on the three men and without further preliminaries the trap was sprung.

All night the prisoners had been under armed guard of 50 deputy sheriffs who paced up and down inside and outside of the jail, which is located in the main business section of the city. Crowds loitered about the streets all night but were prevented from approaching the jail. Authorities were making certain that no last minute jailbreak would be perpetrated.

Meanwhile, inside the jail the prisoners were confined in separate and separated cells. Duschkowski refused to admit a priest but Stalesky and Torrez, more visibly broken by their ordeal, admitted priests, read prayer books, and embraced rosaries.

Torrez tried to sing but each time his voice was raised it was choked in sobs and he gave it up.

None of them partook of nourishment during the night but this morning they ate a light breakfast of bread and coffee.

Duschkowski had no "final statement." Stalesky said merely that he "already had talked too much." Torrez offered this parting bit of advice:

"Tell the young fellows to keep away from bad company. Even though I am innocent, bad company is sending me to my grave. I am prepared for death. I have made peace with my God."

In the crowd that witnessed the triple execution were Val Klein, brother of the slain deputy warden; Thomas F. Moore, brother of Klein's widow; Alexander Grant, father of Police Sergeant Leo Grant, who was killed by the prisoners when they escaped last winter; and friends and relatives of other victims of the condemned convicts.

Attorneys acting for the Mexican consul made a last futile attempt to save Torrez when they filed a petition for a sanity hearing. They could find no judge to hear the plea, however.

Duschkowski, Stalesky and Torrez all were serving life terms in the state penitentiary for murder. With four other "lifers"—Bernardo Roa, Gregory Rizzo, Edward Price, and Charles Shader—they entered Klein's office in May, 1926, complained of prison conditions, and then, without warning, assaulted him with improvised instruments and killed him.

The seven then seized a captain of the guards and forced him to drive them in an official prison automobile through the gates to freedom.

Several miles from the prison they abandoned the motor car and fled on foot.

Price was shot to death when he resisted arrest by a posse. The others were captured and returned to the Will county jail, tried for Klein's murder, were convicted, and sentenced to die.

Once the gallows were erected to execute all six but shortly before the date of execution they obtained a stay to permit an appeal to the supreme court. Their appeal was denied but before the date of execution they obtained a stay to permit an appeal to the supreme court. Their appeal was denied but before the decision came they made a second bold attempt to escape. This time it was that Torrez sang "La Paloma" while the others sawed the cell bars.

They fled to Chicago to be met by a group of policemen. In the gun battle which followed Torrez was wounded and a policeman was killed—the third murder for which all involved might be held. In this fight, however, Roa escaped.

The five, including the wounded Torrez, were returned once more to the Will county jail from where they attempted another break just a few weeks ago. This time Rizzo was shot down and killed by jail guards but Shader escaped.

Thus were left only Duschowski, Torrez and Stalesky to pay the penalty today for Klein's murder. And it was because of their mad breaks for freedom that 50 armed men stood over them all last night to make sure that the state of Illinois might claim the lives of these three it has been able to hold for formal execution.

BOTTLE MAY BE HOAX, REPORTS NUNGESSER, COLI

Wilhelmshaven, Germany, July 15.—(UP)—A bottle was washed ashore on the island of Wangeroog in the North sea today, containing a letter purported to be signed by Nungesser and Coli, missing French aviators.

The letter, which authorities regarded skeptically, read:

"Save us. We are without bread and without water on a little island in the Atlantic."

A crude map sketching a spot somewhere west of Bermuda was included in the bottle.

NEW PROPOSAL ON PROBLEM OF CRUISERS

LATTER OFFERED BY JAPAN AND CONTAINING TWO POINTS

HOLDS PROMISE OF BEING SATISFACTORY TO THREE POWERS

By HENRY WOOD
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Geneva, July 15.—The outlook for the success of the naval armaments conference seemed brighter today.

The conferees had before them for consideration over the week-end a new proposal for the solution of the difficult cruiser problem. Offered by Japan, it contains two main points.

First, that Great Britain and the United State each be allowed ten 10,000-ton cruisers and Japan seven or less. Second that the signatories be permitted to retain vessels that have passed the age limit without including them in their total tonnage figures.

The proposal held promise of being satisfactory to all three powers. The second point would enable Great Britain to possess an auxiliary craft adequate to protect her trade routes—which, the British delegation has insisted from the beginning of the conference, is all she desires—without giving that nation a larger offensive fleet than the United States. That is on the assumption that the obsolete vessels not included in Britain's tonnage would be useful for defensive purposes only.

The second reason for optimism was the fact that the conference survived yesterday's plenary session.

That session was to have been held Monday, but at the last minute the death of Vice President O'Higgins of the Irish Free State served as an excuse for postponing it. The situation was such at the time that a plenary session probably would have meant the end of the conference—without an agreement.

But between Monday and yesterday things happened. A number of leading British papers sharply criticized the British position at the conference; also, Sir Austen Chamberlin, British foreign secretary, made a speech in the house of commons which contained a hint or two for the British at Geneva.

3 AUSTRALIAN FLIERS TO FLY FRISCO TO SYDNEY

Sydney, Australia, July 15—(UP)—Three Australian aviators today were en route aboard the steamer Tahiti for San Francisco, where they will undertake a flight back to Sydney.

Their route calls for stops at Honolulu, Fanning Islands, the Phoenix Group, Samoa, Fiji, New Caledonia and Brisbane.

The fliers are Kings Fortsmith, Keith Anderson, pilots, and C. T. P. Ulm, mechanic.

The cost of the undertaking is estimated at $35,000. Sydney and Melbourne papers have opened subscription lists and it is believed the government will contribute a share.

R. W. CLARK NAMED GENERAL TRAFFIC MANAGER OF N. P.

St. Paul, Minn., July 15.—(UP)—Appointment of R. W. Clark, assistant to Charles Donnelly, president of the Northern Pacific railroad, as general traffic manager of the road was announced here yesterday.

In making the announcement, J. G. Woodworth, vice president in charge of traffic, stated Clark will have freight and passenger business of the Northern Pacific under his jurisdiction.

The appointment is effective next Sunday when the new department will start operations.

Clark has been associated with the Northern Pacific for 25 years.

The crowd stormed the Palace of Justice, one of the parliament buildings near the heart of the city, and seized documents which they burned.

They then set fire to the building and prevented firemen from approaching.

Police fired desultorily but the crowd held on and even cut the fire hose to keep the blaze raging in the court house.

Meanwhile cries of "revolution" were heard in various parts of the city. Police saved one householder from being the victim of a mob.

Leading socialists came before the crowd and pleaded for order.

They were met with cries of:

"Traitors! Now our day has come! You have cold feet!"

Groups attacked a police station and turned on newspaper offices.

The mob then gathered in front of the city hall.

The rioting took place near the opera, only a block or so away from the Imperial Hotel, where many American tourists are stopping.

INDIANA EDITOR GAINS CLEMENCY

GOV. ED. JACKSON PAROLES GEORGE DALE FOR CONTEMPT OF COURT

Indianapolis, Ind., July 15.—(UP)—Gov. Ed. Jackson of Indiana today extended executive clemency to George Dale, editor of the Muncie, Ind., Post-Democrat, announcing that Dale would be paroled from his ninety-day term, for contempt of court.

Gov. Jackson announced that the trustees of the Indiana State Farm at Putnamville after a hearing Wednesday had recommended that Dale be paroled "under the usual conditions, without remission of fine" and that he would carry out the recommendations.

Publication of articles in his newspaper brought Dale before Judge Clarence Dearth of Muncie for contempt of court. He was sentenced to ninety days for criticizing the methods of the Muncie jurist.

Dale, however started a fight for freedom. Successive appeals to the Indiana state supreme court and the United States supreme court were taken.

Both appeals failed. The state supreme court ruled that "the truth is no defense" in a contempt action. The United States supreme court refused to review the case, and sent it back to the Indiana tribunal.

Denial of the appeal was to have been certified by the Indiana court early next week. Without parole, Dale then would have been forced to serve his sentence.

DEATH CLAIMS ITS STAKES TODAY, 3 ARE HANGED

ARE CONVICTED OF MURDERING DEPUTY WARDEN PETER M. KLEIN

By MAX BUCKINGHAM
United Press Staff Correspondent

Death Chamber, Will County Jail, Joliet, Ill., July 15.—Death claimed its stakes today in the daring gamble three men made to escape the punishment for murder.

At 6:14 a. m. Roberto Torrez, Charles Duschkowski, and Walter Stalesky were hanged simultaneously from the same gallows, paying the state of Illinois the supreme penalty for murdering Deputy Warden Peter M. Klein in their escape from the state penitentiary in May, 1926.

The three were originally sentenced to life terms in the state penitentiary for murder. With four other "lifers" they plotted to win their freedom at the expense of slaying Warden Klein.

They were caught, convicted of Klein's murder, and sentenced to die. Twice more they attempted to evade justice by breaking jail and twice more they were recaptured. Today they were hanged and death had won.

Two of their original comrades in Klein's murder have been killed by officers who ran them down. Only two of the original seven actually escaped and have yet to pay the penalty.

The three men went to their death smiling. As they walked out of the quaint little, red brick jail into the daylight of the jail yard where the scaffold awaited them, they were greeted by a crowd of more than 1,000 persons who had gathered to witness the spectacle of a triple execution. Many more waited outside on the streets, denied admission to the death chamber.

But the doomed prisoners appeared unafraid. They grinned at those who had come to watch them die.

Torrez, the little Mexican songbird who sang "La Paloma" hours at a stretch last winter to drown out the sawing of iron bars by his comrades; Torrez, the most colorful of all the men, shrugged his shoulders as he walked down the lane that was opened for him and shouted a good-bye to a few deputies whom he recognized in the throng.

Shortly after 6 a. m. the procession from the jail started. Sheriff Albert E. Markgraf led the way. He was followed by four priests, including a former Franciscan monk. Then came the prisoners—Torrez in the lead.

Torrez wore a white shirt, blue trousers, and house slippers and his mates were similarly clad.

A heavy fog hung low over the jail yard, but the high scaffold stood out plainly, showing the three nooses hanging limply at their places.

As the three men ascended the scaffold, the priests offered them the last sacraments. But Duschkowski, with the same sneering bravado that he has shown throughout his captivity, turned away. He chose instead to smile down at the throng gathered below him and then up to the loose hemp that dangled just above his head. He seemed to examine it closely with interest.

Duschkowski was first to feel the hemp about his throat. Stalesky was second and finally the noose was adjusted on Torrez.

The long white robes next were fitted on the three men and without further preliminaries the trap was sprung.

All night the prisoners had been under armed guard of 50 deputy sheriffs who paced up and down inside and outside of the jail, which is located in the main business section of the city. Crowds loitered about the streets all night but were prevented from approaching the jail. Authorities were making certain that no last minute jailbreak would be perpetrated.

Meanwhile, inside the jail the prisoners were confined in separate and separated cells. Duschkowski refused to admit a priest but Stalesky and Torrez, more visibly broken by their ordeal, admitted priests, read prayer books, and embraced rosaries.

Torrez tried to sing but each time his voice was raised it was choked in sobs and he gave it up.

None of them partook of nourishment during the night but this morning they ate a light breakfast of bread and coffee.

Duschkowski had no "final statement." Stalesky said merely that he "already had talked too much." Torrez offered this parting bit of advice:

"Tell the young fellows to keep away from bad company. Even though I am innocent, bad company is sending me to my grave. I am prepared for death. I have made peace with my God."

In the crowd that witnessed the triple execution were Val Klein, brother of the slain deputy warden; Thomas F. Moore, brother of Klein's widow; Alexander Grant, father of Police Sergeant Leo Grant, who was killed by the prisoners when they escaped last winter; and friends and relatives of other victims of the condemned convicts.

Attorneys acting for the Mexican consul made a last futile attempt to save Torrez when they filed a petition for a sanity hearing. They could find no judge to hear the plea, however.

Duschkowski, Stalesky and Torrez all were serving life terms in the state penitentiary for murder. With four other "lifers"—Bernardo Roa, Gregory Rizzo, Edward Price, and Charles Shader—they entered Klein's office in May, 1926, complained of prison conditions, and then, without warning, assaulted him with improvised instruments and killed him.

The seven then seized a captain of the guards and forced him to drive them in an official prison automobile through the gates to freedom.

Several miles from the prison they abandoned the motor car and fled on foot.

Price was shot to death when he resisted arrest by a posse. The others were captured and returned to the Will county jail, tried for Klein's murder, were convicted, and sentenced to die.

Once the gallows were erected to execute all six but shortly before the date of execution they obtained a stay to permit an appeal to the supreme court. Their appeal was denied but before the date of execution they obtained a stay to permit an appeal to the supreme court. Their appeal was denied but before the decision came they made a second bold attempt to escape. This time it was that Torrez sang "La Paloma" while the others sawed the cell bars.

They fled to Chicago to be met by a group of policemen. In the gun battle which followed Torrez was wounded and a policeman was killed—the third murder for which all involved might be held. In this fight, however, Roa escaped.

The five, including the wounded Torrez, were returned once more to the Will county jail from where they attempted another break just a few weeks ago. This time Rizzo was shot down and killed by jail guards but Shader escaped.

Thus were left only Duschowski, Torrez and Stalesky to pay the penalty today for Klein's murder. And it was because of their mad breaks for freedom that 50 armed men stood over them all last night to make sure that the state of Illinois might claim the lives of these three it has been able to hold for formal execution.

BOTTLE MAY BE HOAX, REPORTS NUNGESSER, COLI

Wilhelmshaven, Germany, July 15.—(UP)—A bottle was washed ashore on the island of Wangeroog in the North sea today, containing a letter purported to be signed by Nungesser and Coli, missing French aviators.

The letter, which authorities regarded skeptically, read:

"Save us. We are without bread and without water on a little island in the Atlantic."

A crude map sketching a spot somewhere west of Bermuda was included in the bottle.

NEW PROPOSAL ON PROBLEM OF CRUISERS

LATTER OFFERED BY JAPAN AND CONTAINING TWO POINTS

HOLDS PROMISE OF BEING SATISFACTORY TO THREE POWERS

By HENRY WOOD
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Geneva, July 15.—The outlook for the success of the naval armaments conference seemed brighter today.

The conferees had before them for consideration over the week-end a new proposal for the solution of the difficult cruiser problem. Offered by Japan, it contains two main points.

First, that Great Britain and the United State each be allowed ten 10,000-ton cruisers and Japan seven or less. Second that the signatories be permitted to retain vessels that have passed the age limit without including them in their total tonnage figures.

The proposal held promise of being satisfactory to all three powers. The second point would enable Great Britain to possess an auxiliary craft adequate to protect her trade routes—which, the British delegation has insisted from the beginning of the conference, is all she desires—without giving that nation a larger offensive fleet than the United States. That is on the assumption that the obsolete vessels not included in Britain's tonnage would be useful for defensive purposes only.

The second reason for optimism was the fact that the conference survived yesterday's plenary session.

That session was to have been held Monday, but at the last minute the death of Vice President O'Higgins of the Irish Free State served as an excuse for postponing it. The situation was such at the time that a plenary session probably would have meant the end of the conference—without an agreement.

But between Monday and yesterday things happened. A number of leading British papers sharply criticized the British position at the conference; also, Sir Austen Chamberlin, British foreign secretary, made a speech in the house of commons which contained a hint or two for the British at Geneva.

The cost of the undertaking is estimated at $35,000. Sydney and Melbourne papers have opened subscription lists and it is believed the government will contribute a share.

HEDDA HOYT TELLS ABOUT LINDBERGH UNDIES

By HEDDA HOYT

New York, July 15.—(UP)—It's lucky that Col. Charles Lindbergh is saved the embarassment of seeing some of the feminine garments called "Lucky Lindberghs"!

Handbags, hats and frocks with winged ornaments and airplane trimmings were first offered as a touching homage to this brave aviator. Now, however, the flapper element has gone in for "Lucky Lindbergh" undergarments and the "Spirit of St. Louis" goes on and on, concealed but not forgotten.

The "Lucky Lindbergh" negligee of radium silk printed in airplane figures suggestive of Lindbergh's plane is but a mild expression of the airplane trend in the undergarment world. There are step-ins, favorites with flappers, with wing-shaped panty portions adorned with little airplane-shaped medallions of lace. Stockings embroidered just below the knees with wings and airplanes are shown by one shop. Matching these are round garters with rhinestone airplane or wing buckles.

As a rule, one wouldn't recognize a "Lindbergh" model were it not for its name, however. It seems that almost anything new in the lingerie world calls itself a "Lindy."

Snakeskin jewelry is creeping into vogue. While this sort of jewelry is used only for sports wear it must be admitted that it has a style of its own. One smart shop is selling bracelets consisting of large square medallions of vari-colored snakeskin mounted in silver and joined together by silver links. The medallions consist of brown, tan and greenish shades of snake woven together to form a vari-colored pattern. They are backed and framed in silver. Pendant monograms of snakeskin worn on tortoise-shell link chains are also popular.

Woven straw envelope purses, embroidered in colorful straw flowers are offered as a new Summer vogue. As a rule, they are matched by straw shoes or hats, the background being of natural straw shade and the embroidery carried out in bright colors.

HEDDA HOYT TELLS ABOUT LINDBERGH UNDIES

By HEDDA HOYT

New York, July 15.—(UP)—It's lucky that Col. Charles Lindbergh is saved the embarassment of seeing some of the feminine garments called "Lucky Lindberghs"!

Handbags, hats and frocks with winged ornaments and airplane trimmings were first offered as a touching homage to this brave aviator. Now, however, the flapper element has gone in for "Lucky Lindbergh" undergarments and the "Spirit of St. Louis" goes on and on, concealed but not forgotten.

The "Lucky Lindbergh" negligee of radium silk printed in airplane figures suggestive of Lindbergh's plane is but a mild expression of the airplane trend in the undergarment world. There are step-ins, favorites with flappers, with wing-shaped panty portions adorned with little airplane-shaped medallions of lace. Stockings embroidered just below the knees with wings and airplanes are shown by one shop. Matching these are round garters with rhinestone airplane or wing buckles.

As a rule, one wouldn't recognize a "Lindbergh" model were it not for its name, however. It seems that almost anything new in the lingerie world calls itself a "Lindy."

Snakeskin jewelry is creeping into vogue. While this sort of jewelry is used only for sports wear it must be admitted that it has a style of its own. One smart shop is selling bracelets consisting of large square medallions of vari-colored snakeskin mounted in silver and joined together by silver links. The medallions consist of brown, tan and greenish shades of snake woven together to form a vari-colored pattern. They are backed and framed in silver. Pendant monograms of snakeskin worn on tortoise-shell link chains are also popular.

Woven straw envelope purses, embroidered in colorful straw flowers are offered as a new Summer vogue. As a rule, they are matched by straw shoes or hats, the background being of natural straw shade and the embroidery carried out in bright colors.

Changed Election Methods

The seventeenth amendment to the Constitution was adopted on May 31, 1913. Prior to this time the United States senators had been selected by the legislatures and not by popular vote as they now are.

McNARY-HAUGEN BILL IS DISCUSSED WITH COOLIDGE

SENATORS NORBECK AND McMASTER OF SOUTH DAKOTA VISIT PRESIDENT

SOUTH DAKOTANS ARE STERN ADVOCATES OF THE MEASURE

By PAUL R. MALLON
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Rapid City, S. D., July 15. — The farm situation out here where the McNary-Haugen bill came from was brought to President Coolidge's attention today by Senators Norbeck and McMaster, republicans, South Dakota. They are both stern advocates of the bill which Mr. Coolidge vetoed and are senators controlling politics in the state where he is spending his three months' vacation.

Mr. Coolidge, however, has given no intimation of his intentions. The United Press has learned that several bankers from the surrounding territory have quietly been called in for conferences and bankers here confidently expect some early action. Whether or not their expectations are father to their desires remains to be seen.

The point invoved in the McNary-Haugen bill of creating a gigantic government-fostered corporation for the purchase of farmers' surplus product clashes with Mr. Coolidge's stand that such a method of farm relief is pure price fixing. On the other hand, advocates of the McNary-Haugen bill insist that Mr. Coolidge's sanctioned plan of creating more and better co-operative marketing is unfeasible.

Norbeck and McMaster were called in by the president as his guests for the day.

Mr. Coolidge this morning received from a delegation of the women's party a personal petition for a constitutional amendment to equalization of women's employment and economic laws in all states. They came here in automobiles from their Colorado Springs, Colo., national convention and last night staged a mass meeting at the town band stand inaugurating their campaign to gain complete equal representation between men and women.

A delegation of five leaders of the Shriners, headed by Clarence W. Dunbar, imperial potentate, and K. A. D. Rahn, past potentate, called on the president at the executive offices and went to the lodge with him for lunch.

Mr. Coolidge had his hair cut on the front porch this morning by John May, colored attache at the White House. Swarms of tourists looked on.

8 YEARS LITIGATION ON STATE FUNDS INTEREST CLOSED

Springfield, Ill., July 15—(UP)—Eight years of litigation over interest earned on state funds when Gov. Len Small was state treasurer was ended today when the governor presented the state a certified check for $650,000.

The presentation was in court and was made to Attorney General Oscar Carlstrom.

The $650,000 was agreed upon between Small and Carlstrom several weeks ago and resulted in settling a suit of the state against Small which had totalled approximately $1,000,000.

KEEN INTEREST IN NEW FORD MODEL CAR

New York, July 15. — (UP) — While no definite announcement concerning the new Ford model has been given out, Wall Street is grasping at every straw which would indicate the effect of its production.

Keen interest was aroused in the financial district today after the reduction in prices by Studebaker and the announcement that the entire new line of Dodge Brothers' cars would be reduced.

Some traders pretended to see the independent automobile companies meeting Ford's new car before it actually appeared as a competitor. It was pointed out that makers are anticipating the effect of the Ford innovation by reducing prices in advance and making a bold play for sales.

Belief that a price war may follow the Ford invasion of a new field was discredited in some quarters, although it was predicted that competition will be the sharpest in the history of the industry.

2 HELD IN JAIL IN CONNECTION WITH BANK ROBBERY

Moorhead, Minn., July 15.—(UP)—Two persons are held in the county jail here today in connection with the robbery of the State Bank at Sabin, near here, of $1,922 late Thursday.

The bank was robbed by two men who held up L. C. Follett, cashier, and escaped in an automobile with a woman who waited for them outside the bank.

The car, bearing a North Dakota license plate, was found a short time later near an open field by police.

Mrs. B. Williams was arrested last night when she visited the county jail to see her husband who has been under arrest for several days charged with provoking an assault. Williams is a used car dealer who came to Moorhead about six weeks ago.

An employee of Williams' concern is also under arrest in connection with the robbery. His name is withheld by police.

CONCEALS IDENTITY TO THE END

Ossining, N. Y., July 15.—(UP)—The identity of William Wagner, who was electrocuted for murder here shortly before midnight, probably will remain a mystery, Sing Sing officials said today.

Wagner admitted a few minutes before he died that his name was fictitious. He left no clues to his identity, and apparently was anxious to keep it concealed.

He went calmly to his death while Mrs. Ruth Snyder and Henry Judd Gray, convicted murderers, sat in their cells in the death house, seeing in his electrocution a possible foreshadowing of their own fate.

Frederick H. Stinchfield Heads Bar Association

St. Paul, July 15.—(UP)—Frederick H. Stinchfield of Minneapolis was elected president at the closing session of the Minnesota State Bar association convention here late Thursday.

Other officers chosen are Thomas C. Dagget, St. Paul, vice president; Chester L. Caldwell, secretary, and W. G. Graves, treasurer.

grim mood was seen when the army's tri-motored "Bird of Paradise" was made ready today to fly to the relief of the "City of Oakland" which once attempted unsuccessfully to race the larger plane to Hawaii.

The army's trans-Pacific Fokker was ready for 10 hours' flying.

Its start depended upon whether steamships were able to locate the monoplane in which Ernest Smith and Emory Bronte flashed they would land on the sea, approximately 670 miles off the Island of Maui.

Two pursuit planes were being conditioned at Wheeler Field for emergency, subject to further orders.

Captain Sayer, commanding the Calawaii, wirelessed:

"5:45 A. M. plane landing in sea using rubber life boats. Asking for help. Wilhelmina now 75 miles away proceeding under forced draught to plane."

Two pursuit planes were being conditioned at Wheeler Field for emergency, subject to further orders.

The steamship Wilhelmina, speeding to the position last reported by Smith, had been in no further communication with the plane.

The last message was received at 7:50 A. M. Pacific coast time, saying:

"Please send help."

Honolulu, T. H., July 15. — The civilian trans-Pacific monoplane of Ernest Smith and Emory Bronte is running out of gasoline and in danger of going down, a message from the plane's radio, WLO, said at 3:45 A. M. today.

The fliers estimated they had sufficient gas for four hours' flying.

The plane's position was estimated at 780 miles northeast of Honolulu.

The S. O. S. first picked up by the steamers Wilhelmina and President Pierce was garbled. It read either "Can stay up for hour" or "Can stay up four hours."

Later conversation with the plane was believed to indicate that the second reading was correct.

Smith radioed at 4 A. M. Honolulu time:

"Will be down soon."

Major Miller, commander at the Wheeler flying field, communicated with Luke field regarding relief plans.

Smith asked for tug boats and planes.

It was believed the fastest boats available would be rushed to their help. Submarines may also be sent.

The tri-motored Fokker monoplane used in the army's trans-Pacific flight was being conditioned at Wheeler field to take off in a rescue attempt.

"Last message" were the words preceding the flash that the "City of Oakland" was in danger of coming down.

The Wilhelmina reported shortly after 4 A. M. Honolulu time that it was unable to communicate with Smith.

From the standpoint of communication, the flight, even if unsuccessful, will have proved the most remarkable in history.

Both the mainland and the islands have been in almost constant communication with WLO, the plane's radio, since the take-off from Oakland airport.

Clyde Finter was selected to pilot the "Bird of Paradise" to the relief of Smith and Bronte.

He will be accompanied by a relief pilot and mechanic.

The waters about Maui are infested with sharks.

One of Bronte's last requests before taking off was for an army revolver to "shoot sharks with."

San Francisco, July 15.—Emergency rations sufficient to sustain life about three days was included in the protective equipment of the "City of Oakland" in addition to the regular food supply.

The emergency rations consisted of two tins of beef, one tin of bouillon cubes, raisins and a small quantity of zwieback.

The regular supply consisted of three quarts of milk, two bottles of malted milk tablets, one bag of cookies, a bottle of olives, eight chicken sandwiches, a quart of coffee and a half gallon of distilled water.

WINNIPEG'S FIRST AIR MAIL PLANE

Winnipeg, Man., July 15.—(UP)—Winnipeg's first air mail plane piloted by Verne Roberts, which left Fargo, N. D., early this morning, landed here at 12:30 P. M. today. The flight wa smade in the nature of a good will journey.

Roberts was delayed two hours at Pembina, N. D., refueling his plane.

FIRE ENDANGERS BUSINESS SECTION OF BINGHAM, UTAH

Salt Lake City, Utah, July 15.—(UP)—Two frame hotel buildings, and four combination stores and boarding houses were completely destroyed by fire at Bingmah, Utah, southwest of here early today.

On the other hand, advocates of the McNary-Haugen bill insist that Mr. Coolidge's sanctioned plan of creating more and better co-operative marketing is unfeasible.

Norbeck and McMaster were called in by the president as his guests for the day.

Mr. Coolidge this morning received from a delegation of the women's party a personal petition for a constitutional amendment to equalization of women's employment and economic laws in all states. They came here in automobiles from their Colorado Springs, Colo., national convention and last night staged a mass meeting at the town band stand inaugurating their campaign to gain complete equal representation between men and women.

A delegation of five leaders of the Shriners, headed by Clarence W. Dunbar, imperial potentate, and K. A. D. Rahn, past potentate, called on the president at the executive offices and went to the lodge with him for lunch.

Mr. Coolidge had his hair cut on the front porch this morning by John May, colored attache at the White House. Swarms of tourists looked on.

8 YEARS LITIGATION ON STATE FUNDS INTEREST CLOSED

Springfield, Ill., July 15—(UP)—Eight years of litigation over interest earned on state funds when Gov. Len Small was state treasurer was ended today when the povernor presented the state a certified check for $650,000.

The presentation was in court and was made to Attorney General Oscar Carlstrom.

The $650,000 was agreed upon between Small and Carlstrom several weeks ago and resulted in settling a suit of the state against Small which had totalled approximately $1,000,000.

KEEN INTEREST IN NEW FORD MODEL CAR

New York, July 15. — (UP) — While no definite announcement concerning the new Ford model has been given out, Wall Street is grasping at every straw which would indicate the effect of its production.

Keen interest was aroused in the financial district today after the reduction in prices by Studebaker and the announcement that the entire new line of Dodge Brothers' cars would be reduced.

Some traders pretended to see the independent automobile companies meeting Ford's new car before it actually appeared as a competitor. It was pointed out that makers are anticipating the effect of the Ford innovation by reducing prices in advance and making a bold play for sales.

Belief that a price war may follow the Ford invasion of a new field was discredited in some quarters, although it was predicted that competition will be the sharpest in the history of the industry.

2 HELD IN JAIL IN CONNECTION WITH BANK ROBBERY

Moorhead, Minn., July 15.—(UP)—Two persons are held in the county jail here today in connection with the robbery of the State Bank at Sabin, near here, of $1,922 late Thursday.

The bank was robbed by two men who held up L. C. Follett, cashier, and escaped in an automobile with a woman who waited for them outside the bank.

The car, bearing a North Dakota license plate, was found a short time later near an open field by police.

Mrs. B. Williams was arrested last night when she visited the county jail to see her husband who has been under arrest for several days charged with provoking an assault. Williams is a used car dealer who came to Moorhead about six weeks ago.

An employee of Williams' concern is also under arrest in connection with the robbery. His name is withheld by police.

CONCEALS IDENTITY TO THE END

Ossining, N. Y., July 15.—(UP)—The identity of William Wagner, who was electrocuted for murder here shortly before midnight, probably will remain a mystery, Sing Sing officials said today.

Wagner admitted a few minutes before he died that his name was fictitious. He left no clues to his identity, and apparently was anxious to keep it concealed.

He went calmly to his death while Mrs. Ruth Snyder and Henry Judd Gray, convicted murderers, sat in their cells in the death house, seeing in his electrocution a possible foreshadowing of their own fate.

Frederick H. Stinchfield Heads Bar Association

St. Paul, July 15.—(UP)—Frederick H. Stinchfield of Minneapolis was elected president at the closing session of the Minnesota State Bar association convention here late Thursday.

Other officers chosen are Thomas C. Dagget, St. Paul, vice president; Chester L. Caldwell, secretary, and W. G. Graves, treasurer.

grim mood was seen when the army's tri-motored "Bird of Paradise" was made ready today to fly to the relief of the "City of Oakland" which once attempted unsuccessfully to race the larger plane to Hawaii.

The army's trans-Pacific Fokker was ready for 10 hours' flying.

Its start depended upon whether steamships were able to locate the monoplane in which Ernest Smith and Emory Bronte flashed they would land on the sea, approximately 670 miles off the Island of Maui.

Two pursuit planes were being conditioned at Wheeler Field for emergency, subject to further orders.

Captain Sayer, commanding the Calawaii, wirelessed:

"5:45 A. M. plane landing in sea using rubber life boats. Asking for help. Wilhelmina now 75 miles away proceeding under forced draught to plane."

Two pursuit planes were being conditioned at Wheeler Field for emergency, subject to further orders.

The steamship Wilhelmina, speeding to the position last reported by Smith, had been in no further communication with the plane.

The last message was received at 7:50 A. M. Pacific coast time, saying:

"Please send help."

Honolulu, T. H., July 15. — The civilian trans-Pacific monoplane of Ernest Smith and Emory Bronte is running out of gasoline and in danger of going down, a message from the plane's radio, WLO, said at 3:45 A. M. today.

The fliers estimated they had sufficient gas for four hours' flying.

The plane's position was estimated at 780 miles northeast of Honolulu.

The S. O. S. first picked up by the steamers Wilhelmina and President Pierce was garbled. It read either "Can stay up for hour" or "Can stay up four hours."

Later conversation with the plane was believed to indicate that the second reading was correct.

Smith radioed at 4 A. M. Honolulu time:

"Will be down soon."

Major Miller, commander at the Wheeler flying field, communicated with Luke field regarding relief plans.

Smith asked for tug boats and planes.

It was believed the fastest boats available would be rushed to their help. Submarines may also be sent.

The tri-motored Fokker monoplane used in the army's trans-Pacific flight was being conditioned at Wheeler field to take off in a rescue attempt.

"Last message" were the words preceding the flash that the "City of Oakland" was in danger of coming down.

The Wilhelmina reported shortly after 4 A. M. Honolulu time that it was unable to communicate with Smith.

From the standpoint of communication, the flight, even if unsuccessful, will have proved the most remarkable in history.

Both the mainland and the islands have been in almost constant communication with WLO, the plane's radio, since the take-off from Oakland airport.

Clyde Finter was selected to pilot the "Bird of Paradise" to the relief of Smith and Bronte.

He will be accompanied by a relief pilot and mechanic.

The waters about Maui are infested with sharks.

One of Bronte's last requests before taking off was for an army revolver to "shoot sharks with."

San Francisco, July 15.—Emergency rations sufficient to sustain life about three days was included in the protective equipment of the "City of Oakland" in addition to the regular food supply.

The emergency rations consisted of two tins of beef, one tin of bouillon cubes, raisins and a small quantity of zweiback.

The regular supply consisted of three quarts of milk, two bottles of malted milk tablets, one bag of cookies, a bottle of olives, eight chicken sandwiches, a quart of coffee and a half gallon of distilled water.

WINNIPEG'S FIRST AIR MAIL PLANE

Winnipeg, Man., July 15.—(UP)—Winnipeg's first air mail plane piloted by Verne Roberts, which left Fargo, N. D., early this morning, landed here at 12:30 P. M. today. The flight wa smade in the nature of a good will journey.

Roberts was delayed two hours at Pembina, N. D., refueling his plane.

FIRE ENDANGERS BUSINESS SECTION OF BINGHAM, UTAH

Salt Lake City, Utah, July 15.—(UP)—Two frame hotel buildings, and four combination stores and boarding houses were completely destroyed by fire at Bingmah, Utah, southwest of here early today.

GOOD ROADS ARE THE CHEAPEST IN THE END

GOOD roads are the cheapest in the end. It's like buying clothing, shoes, etc. The best gives the longest wear, the most satisfaction and excels in every way the cheap goods.

Good roads used to be classed as luxuries. So did automobiles, and radios, phonographs, electric washing machines, etc. Such is now no longer the case. When one considers the loss of time incurred by rough or muddy unimproved roads, together with the wear and tear on vehicles, the amount of gasoline used or the teams worn out, paved or hard-surfaced roads are a real necessity and they should be built as rapidly as possible.

After our trunk highways are put in the best possible shape, comes the necessity of adequate improvement of all connecting links. The ideal state of the future in road building will have been reached when every farm is well connected with a hard-surfaced roadway. One intervening mile of muddy or almost impassable roadway cuts grievously into the cost of operating such a farm.

The Department of Agriculture has well said that "for the movement of every vehicle over a road there is a certain cost, which is less if the road be improved. Logically, therefore, the only limit that should be placed on expenditures for road improvement is the amount that can be saved in vehicular operation cost. The country loses more in increased cost of operating vehicles by not improving roads than it does to improve them. In other words, it pays for improved roads whether it has them or not, and it pays less by having them than by not having them."

FRATERNAL DISCORDS

A QUAINT thing about the class-conscious proletariat is that it always seems to be conscious of such a bewildering number of classes. Of course, it may have been merely an excess of sympathy which led the Sacco-Vanzetti sympathizers in Union square to sock each other in the eye, crown each other with soda water bottles and give each other into custody, but as an example of a fraternal protest against a miscarriage of reactionary justice it must be admitted that the proceedings were not altogether impressive. Justice, in the shape of the police, ultimately rescued the protestants from themselves, and the spirit of working class solidarity was left to brood over Union square, while the Sacco-Vanzetti liberation committee (right wing) was stigmatizing the Sacco-Vanzetti emergency committee (left wing) as the perpetrators of a "dirty trick," and the Sacco-Vanzetti emergency committee was alluding to the "small, mean, petty and selfish ends" of the Sacco-Vanzetti liberation committee.

It is confusing. There used to be a tendency to lump ultra-radicals, socialist, communists and other extreme defenders of the new dispensation as all belonging to the same army of liberation. Time has taught us our error. To the advocate of universal brotherhood there is no enemy so deadly as the advocate of a different brand of universal brotherhood.—New York Herald Tribune.

COMMENTS ON SHIPSTEAD'S TALK

As mentioned by the editor of the Milaco Tribune, Editor Grace Dunn of the Princeton Union states that she listened to Senator Shipstead discuss the agricultural problem at the Glendorado picnic for over an hour but he failed to make a single suggestion how the difficulties of the farmers could be solved.

"We have heard the same subjects threshed over numerous times with the same tangible result. In the first place the problem probably cannot be solved, and it is more a hypothetical matter in the minds of politicians than anything else. There are problems in every line of endeavor, and always will be.

"The way to make the farm more prosperous in our humble opinion, is along Rudy Lee's line, to have the goods to sell and work continually along the line of raising better goods and producing them at lower cost."

GOD BLESS THE EDITORS

THE St. Cloud Journal-Press records editorially that thirty-eight years ago W. W. Smith of St. Cloud, then a resident of a far western state, signed a note for a friend, who later was visited with misfortune in a bank failure, in which he lost so heavily that he was not able to pay the obligation to Smith.

"Today Mr. Smith received a check for the amount of the note, $300. It is needless to say that this man is an editor.

"'Of all the men who are in my debt, bankers and others, the only one who appears to have a conscience and a memory is an editor. God bless the scribes,' is W. W.'s fervent prayer."

THE GOLDEN AGE OF LIFE

THE golden age of life is when man is accomplishing something, doing something for the good of humanity. With some, however, the golden age means only the accumulation of dollars. Money-getting is commendable in a way, but a percentage should be set apart for humanitarian aid.

No need to give to high-sounding, widely-known institutions if there is necessity or need in your own block.

THE League of Minnesota Municipalities has come to the conclusion that three in a seat is a dangerous proposition, the seat being the front seat of an automobile in motion. It's dangerous too when the driver has anyone in his lap or is seated in the lap of another person, or when the driver has his arm around another person, or when another person has an arm around the driver, while the car is in motion.

THE Pequot Review reports that more than a ton of butter manufactured at the Farmers Cooperative Creamery at Pequot during the first ten days of July was bought in the locality, largely by summer resorts and summer tourists. During June 3,500 pounds was sold locally, a gain of 1,000 pounds over June sales last year.

IN speaking of the wisdom of friendship, Emerson says we take care of our health, we lay up money, we make our roof tight and our clothing sufficient but who provides wisely that we shall not be wanting in the best property of all—friends?

PAYING political debts by checks has one disadvantage, the cancelled check may appear in the news.

What Every Girl Should Know

By GISA PRUCHONE.

Copyright, 1927, Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc.

"WHAT EVERY GIRL SHOULD KNOW," with Patsy Ruth Miller, is a Warner Bros. picturization of this novel.

SYNOPSIS

Mary Sullivan—slender, beautiful, red-headed—is the meteor of the Garden City tennis tournament. A poetical, queerly spiritual girl is Mary, despite her physical prowess. She has grown up with tennis balls. Her mother died sewing them for a living. Her spirit lives on in Mary. Mary becomes acquainted with Wally Mason, a young reporter. Wally and Mary have much in common. Mary keeps house for her brothers, David and Robert. David, the family support, hopes Mary will get safely married; but Mary disbelieves in love. Wally takes her for a ride, and muses.

CHAPTER II—Continued

"Then," Wally philosophized, "you're handed a nasty wallop from the ethereal blue, for no darn good reason that you can see, and it leaves you bleary for a while. Then the cinder's out, you either get it out yourself or some kind soul helps—or tries to," with a grin at Mary—"and you sail along cockily as before. Sometimes the wallop is a big one, though—and you lose an eye—then what do you do, oh, Dolores, my lady of pain? You are Dolores, my lady of Pain, you understand, because you are going to be a big hurt to me, sweet. Don't wrinkle your forehead at me. It isn't pretty—what I can see of it between those hands of yours. Don't you believe it?"

"That I will be a lady of pain to you?"

"Yes."

"Of course not, silly."

"No?" quizzically. "You are certain of that? Can I depend upon that? You won't hurt me ever, Elaine?" and the quizzical look was gone. He saw the road before them

"I've never danced with you," Wally murmured.

being swallowed up as they sped over it, yet didn't see it with his mind's eye. His being was quivering with the knowledge of but one thing in the world, and that was Mary beside him. He felt for her hand where she held it over her cheek, and pulled it down to rest in his where it lay between them. And then, with the reversion that she had grown to expect from him, "Tell me, Elaine—what would you do if the bolt from the blue came to you, and your road was dimmed for a while?"

CHAPTER III

She remembered that ever after. It was wrong to speak of coincidence, carelessly, like that, with never a thought as to the depth that may lie behind it. It was wrong, she thought, and that queer gnawing pain at her heart leaped again, and wrought its way further and further into her being. Coincidence was a warning from Fate, a warning to watch the road ahead, a warning of a detour. Coincidence was the bell fate rang when you reached the railroad crossing of life, when you reached a point where the white bars were to be lowered, and your journey ahead stopped for a while. Then when the bars are raised, you may lack a very essential part of you, and really feel that you cannot make the grade, but there is no turning back. You do go on, nevertheless, because that is life. And eventually, this part of you that you deemed so essential at one time, this part of you is no longer necessary, for you have learned the bitter lesson of doing without—but the memory of its possession is always with you, and gnaws at your breast, as it did at Mary's. Just now it didn't seem as if she ever would go on. There was nowhere to go, with part of her gone, like that. She couldn't take a step without the wince of pain. Why not remain still and linger in memories? Memories of her dear, dead mother. Then she learned that she must go on—and did, somehow—never knowing how, when she reached there—nor why—especially why——

So very blithely she answered Wally, "What would I do if the road were dimmed for a while? I—I'd leap the chasm, and go right merrily on!" and was very triumphant and very young, delightfully young, Wally thought, and pressed her hand and laughed, knowing that the child would be taught, and that she would snub her nose in the teaching, and like David, it pained him very, very much. Mary would remember every detail of that day—would naturally, because of the blankness of horror that came at the end, and would have anyway because of the pleasantness before the light went out. Behind the road, hidden well behind tangles of trees and bushes and hedges and the liquid murmur of a little running brook, they found an inn. "It's rascally, really," Wally had murmured. What he meant was its coyness in hiding, when all it really desired in all the world was to be noticed, and patronized. To this end the road for a mile or so ahead had been covered with hands, painted green, and pointing toward The Little Inn, assuring the traveller of the tranquillity that comes as the natural sequence to a well-filled stomach. Music also, and the smoothness of a dancing floor.

"I've never danced with you, sweet," Wally murmured as he helped her from the car. And, "No," brightly, "you haven't," said Mary, and thought that it doubtlessly would be pleasant, dancing with Wally, calmly, like that. And Wally thought that time would teach this young thing. Time, and, with the help of nature, Wally——

Within, the delights that were promised that mile or two back were amply fulfilled. Fulfilled to the tune of music that came faintly from somewhere, it was difficult seeing just where, but it sounded as though it had fainted across a body of water, which was very pleasant. There were very few guests in the place, and fewer waiters at that hour. Dusk had fallen, and twilight was deepening outside. They found a little round white table with a shaded pink light, though both Wally and Mary preferred the greyness of the twilight that simmered in through their window. They gave their order, which was hearty. They both announced that they could eat, which pleased the waiter, who promised rare food, which, of course, Wally hadn't heard, for he was looking at Elaine across the table from him, and Elaine was equally absorbed in listening to the gurgle of the brook that could be heard outside.

"It's lovely!" she cried. "The brook—and the music here! I'm happy."

"I'm glad, Elaine," said Wally. "Make me happy and dance with me."

"Of—course."

Delightful. Dancing with Wally. He danced as well as he drove. Easily, gracefully, seeming to glide with no effort. There was no suspicion of his muttering "one, two, three!" in time to the music, beneath his breath. Mary had danced with such. And she? Wally hardly felt her in his arms, but then, it was what he had anticipated. One could hardly watch that eager young body leaping toward the sun in pursuit of a round white ball and think of anything but the grace of a bird. He knew that he loved her, and when he glanced down at the top of her gleaming head and called her "Dolores!" beneath his breath, like that—to which she replied with a comical grimace, "I'm starved—absolutely!" he knew that she would indeed be his lady of pain. But they returned to their table, while the others still moved to the languid strains that sounded as though they came across the water, and Mary commenced eating, while Wally still felt the peace of her in his arms. The peace and the agony: An equal amount of each. Probably a greater share of agony? Probably.

"That will always be a beautiful memory, Wally," she said, when he tucked her in against the coolness of the long ride home. There was no moon, but there never had been a heaven so full of stars. The road was milky white with them.

"I hope always to give you happy memories, Elaine," said he.

They both remembered that.

The wind sang past them, and the stars shed enough light to drive by, and Mary crept close to Wally's side because of the wind and a very little because of the queer blobs and shapes at the side of the road that the headlights miraculously transposed into very innocent bushes as they passed them. Swift speed with an occasional car flaring toward them, and quickly dying out with a rush of motor. The entire galaxy of stars flying with the little green car, which fact appeared to Mary as somewhat dizzying. "The entire world's rushing with us Wally," she said.

"Can anybody, including the stars, after seeing you once, ever let you go?" he asked.

"Do go on," she murmured drowsily, "I love to hear you talk. It's soothing. I love it. I could sleep."

"It's soothing. I love it. I could sleep," he mimicked. "Sit up and take your compliments like a lady. And I'm not, incidentally, telling you bed-time stories."

Athletic Bebe Holds Forth in "Senorita"

Bebe Daniels with a moustache! The fascinating Bebe whose femininity has always been so characteristic a feature of her screen prorayals, is wearing a moustache, and wearing it effectively and with the utmost savoir faire.

No, our Bebe has not turned sidehow bearded lady but in her latest romantic comedy, "Senorita," which opened yesterday at the Lyceum theatre, we see her, for the first time since "Wild, Wild Susan," in the role of a boy; in the role of a dashing, swaggering, swashbuckling caballero of South America.

GOOD ROADS ARE THE CHEAPEST IN THE END

GOOD roads are the cheapest in the end. It's like buying clothing, shoes, etc. The best gives the longest wear, the most satisfaction and excels in every way the cheap goods.

Good roads used to be classed as luxuries. So did automobiles, and radios, phonographs, electric washing machines, etc. Such is now no longer the case. When one considers the loss of time incurred by rough or muddy unimproved roads, together with the wear and tear on vehicles, the amount of gasoline used or the teams worn out, paved or hard-surfaced roads are a real necessity and they should be built as rapidly as possible.

After our trunk highways are put in the best possible shape, comes the necessity of adequate improvement of all connecting links. The ideal state of the future in road building will have been reached when every farm is well connected with a hard-surfaced roadway. One intervening mile of muddy or almost impassable roadway cuts grievously into the cost of operating such a farm.

The Department of Agriculture has well said that "for the movement of every vehicle over a road there is a certain cost, which is less if the road be improved. Logically, therefore, the only limit that should be placed on expenditures for road improvement is the amount that can be saved in vehicular operation cost. The country loses more in increased cost of operating vehicles by not improving roads than it does to improve them. In other words, it pays for improved roads whether it has them or not, and it pays less by having them than by not having them."

FRATERNAL DISCORDS

A QUAINT thing about the class-conscious proletariat is that it always seems to be conscious of such a bewildering number of classes. Of course, it may have been merely an excess of sympathy which led the Sacco-Vanzetti sympathizers in Union square to sock each other in the eye, crown each other with soda water bottles and give each other into custody, but as an example of a fraternal protest against a miscarriage of reactionary justice it must be admitted that the proceedings were not altogether impressive. Justice, in the shape of the police, ultimately rescued the protestants from themselves, and the spirit of working class solidarity was left to brood over Union square, while the Sacco-Vanzetti liberation committee (right wing) was stigmatizing the Sacco-Vanzetti emergency committee (left wing) as the perpetrators of a "dirty trick," and the Sacco-Vanzetti emergency committee was alluding to the "small, mean, petty and selfish ends" of the Sacco-Vanzetti liberation committee.

It is confusing. There used to be a tendency to lump ultra-radicals, socialist, communists and other extreme defenders of the new dispensation as all belonging to the same army of liberation. Time has taught us our error. To the advocate of universal brotherhood there is no enemy so deadly as the advocate of a different brand of universal brotherhood.—New York Herald Tribune.

COMMENTS ON SHIPSTEAD'S TALK

As mentioned by the editor of the Milaco Tribune, Editor Grace Dunn of the Princeton Union states that she listened to Senator Shipstead discuss the agricultural problem at the Glendorado picnic for over an hour but he failed to make a single suggestion how the difficulties of the farmers could be solved.

"We have heard the same subjects threshed over numerous times with the same tangible result. In the first place the problem probably cannot be solved, and it is more a hypothetical matter in the minds of politicians than anything else. There are problems in every line of endeavor, and always will be.

"The way to make the farm more prosperous in our humble opinion, is along Rudy Lee's line, to have the goods to sell and work continually along the line of raising better goods and producing them at lower cost."

GOD BLESS THE EDITORS

THE St. Cloud Journal-Press records editorially that thirty-eight years ago W. W. Smith of St. Cloud, then a resident of a far western state, signed a note for a friend, who later was visited with misfortune in a bank failure, in which he lost so heavily that he was not able to pay the obligation to Smith.

"Today Mr. Smith received a check for the amount of the note, $300. It is needless to say that this man is an editor.

" 'Of all the men who are in my debt, bankers and others, the only one who appears to have a conscience and a memory is an editor. God bless the scribes," is W. W.'s fervent prayer."

THE GOLDEN AGE OF LIFE

THE golden age of life is when man is accomplishing something, doing something for the good of humanity. With some, however, the golden age means only the accumulation of dollars. Money-getting is commendable in a way, but a percentage should be set apart for humanitarian aid.

No need to give to high-sounding, widely-known institutions if there is necessity or need in your own block.

THE League of Minnesota Municipalities has come to the conclusion that three in a seat is a dangerous proposition, the seat being the front seat of an automobile in motion. It's dangerous too when the driver has anyone in his lap or is seated in the lap of another person, or when the driver has his arm around another person, or when another person has an arm around the driver, while the car is in motion.

THE Pequot Review reports that more than a ton of butter manufactured at the Farmers Cooperative Creamery at Pequot during the first ten days of July was bought in the locality, largely by summer resorts and summer tourists. During June 3,500 pounds was sold locally, a gain of 1,000 pounds over June sales last year.

IN speaking of the wisdom of friendship, Emerson says we take care of our health, we lay up money, we make our roof tight and our clothing sufficient but who provides wisely that we shall not be wanting in the best property of all—friends?

What Every Girl Should Know

By GISA PRUCHONE

Copyright, 1927, Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc.

"WHAT EVERY GIRL SHOULD KNOW," with Patsy Ruth Miller, is a Warner Bros. picturization of this novel.

SYNOPSIS

Mary Sullivan—slender, beautiful, red-headed—is the meteor of the Garden City tennis tournament. A poetical, queerly spiritual girl is Mary, despite her physical prowess. She has grown up with tennis balls. Her mother died sewing them for a living. Her spirit lives on in Mary. Mary becomes acquainted with Wally Mason, a young reporter. Wally and Mary have much in common. Mary keeps house for her brothers, David and Robert. David, the family support, hopes Mary will get safely married; but Mary disbelieves in love. Wally takes her for a ride, and muses.

"Then," Wally philosophized, "you're handed a nasty wallop from the ethereal blue, for no darn good reason that you can see, and it leaves you bleary for a while. Then the cinder's out, you either get it out yourself or some kind soul helps—or tries to," with a grin at Mary—"and you sail along cockily as before. Sometimes the wallop is a big one, though—and you lose an eye—then what do you do, oh, Dolores, my lady of pain? You are Dolores, my lady of Pain, you understand, because you are going to be a big hurt to me, sweet. Don't wrinkle your forehead at me. It isn't pretty—what I can see of it between those hands of yours. Don't you believe it?"

"That I will be a lady of pain to you?"

"Yes."

"Of course not, silly."

"No?" quizzically. "You are certain of that? Can I depend upon that? You won't hurt me ever, Elaine?" and the quizzical look was gone. He saw the road before them

"I've never danced with you," Wally murmured.

being swallowed up as they sped over it, yet didn't see it with his mind's eye. His being was quivering with the knowledge of but one thing in the world, and that was Mary beside him. He felt for her hand where she held it over her cheek, and pulled it down to rest in his where it lay between them. And then, with the reversion that she had grown to expect from him, "Tell me, Elaine—what would you do if the bolt from the blue came to you, and your road was dimmed for a while?"

CHAPTER III

She remembered that ever after. It was wrong to speak of coincidence, carelessly, like that, with never a thought as to the depth that may lie behind it. It was wrong, she thought, and that queer gnawing pain at her heart leaped again, and wrought its way further and further into her being. Coincidence was a warning from Fate, a warning to watch the road ahead, a warning of a detour. Coincidence was the bell fate rang when you reached the railroad crossing of life, when you reached a point where the white bars were to be lowered, and your journey ahead stopped for a while. Then when the bars are raised, you may lack a very essential part of you, and really feel that you cannot make the grade, but there is no turning back. You do go on, nevertheless, because that is life. And eventually, this part of you that you deemed so essential at one time, this part of you is no longer necessary, for you have learned the bitter lesson of doing without—but the memory of its possession is always with you, and gnaws at your breast, as it did at Mary's. Just now it didn't seem as if she ever would go on. There was nowhere to go, with part of her gone, like that. She couldn't take a step without the wince of pain. Why not remain still and linger in memories? Memories of her dear, dead mother. Then she learned that she must go on—and did, somehow—never knowing how, when she reached there—nor why—especially why——

So very blithely she answered Wally, "What would I do if the road were dimmed for a while? I—I'd leap the chasm, and go right merrily on!" and was very triumphant and very young, delightfully young, Wally thought, and pressed her hand and laughed, knowing that the child would be taught, and that she would snub her nose in the teaching, and like David, it pained him very, very much. Mary would remember every detail of that day—would naturally, because of the blankness of horror that came at the end, and would have anyway because of the pleasantness before the light went out. Behind the road, hidden well behind tangles of trees and bushes and hedges and the liquid murmur of a little running brook, they found an inn. "It's rascally, really," Wally had murmured. What he meant was its coyness in hiding, when all it really desired in all the world was to be noticed, and patronized. To this end the road for a mile or so ahead had been covered with hands, painted green, and pointing toward The Little Inn, assuring the traveller of the tranquillity that comes as the natural sequence to a well-filled stomach. Music also, and the smoothness of a dancing floor.

"I've never danced with you, sweet," Wally murmured as he helped her from the car. And, "No," brightly, "you haven't," said Mary, and thought that it doubtlessly would be pleasant, dancing with Wally, calmly, like that. And Wally thought that time would teach this young thing. Time, and, with the help of nature, Wally——

Within, the delights that were promised that mile or two back were amply fulfilled. Fulfilled to the tune of music that came faintly from somewhere, it was difficult seeing just where, but it sounded as though it had fainted across a body of water, which was very pleasant. There were very few guests in the place, and fewer waiters at that hour. Dusk had fallen, and twilight was deepening outside. They found a little round white table with a shaded pink light, though both Wally and Mary preferred the greyness of the twilight that simmered in through their window. They gave their order, which was hearty. They both announced that they could eat, which pleased the waiter, who promised rare food, which, of course, Wally hadn't heard, for he was looking at Elaine across the table from him, and Elaine was equally absorbed in listening to the gurgle of the brook that could be heard outside.

"It's lovely!" she cried. "The brook—and the music here! I'm happy."

"I'm glad, Elaine," said Wally. "Make me happy and dance with me."

"Of—course."

Delightful. Dancing with Wally He danced as well as he drove. Easily, gracefully, seeming to glide with no effort. There was no suspicion of his muttering "one, two, three!" in time to the music, beneath his breath. Mary had danced with such. And she? Wally hardly felt her in his arms, but then, it was what he had anticipated. One could hardly watch that eager young body leaping toward the sun in pursuit of a round white ball and think of anything but the grace of a bird. He knew that he loved her, and when he glanced down at the top of her gleaming head and called her "Dolores!" beneath his breath, like that—to which she replied with a comical grimace, "I'm starved—absolutely!" he knew that she would indeed be his lady of pain. But they returned to their table, while the others still moved to the languid strains that sounded as though they came across the water, and Mary commenced eating, while Wally still felt the peace of her in his arms. The peace and the agony: An equal amount of each. Probably a greater share of agony? Probably.

"That will always be a beautiful memory, Wally," she said, when he tucked her in against the coolness of the long ride home. There was no moon, but there never had been a heaven so full of stars. The road was milky white with them.

"I hope always to give you happy memories, Elaine," said he.

They both remembered that.

The wind sang past them, and the stars shed enough light to drive by, and Mary crept close to Wally's side because of the wind and a very little because of the queer blobs and shapes at the side of the road that the headlights miraculously transposed into very innocent bushes as they passed them. Swift speed with an occasional car flaring toward them, and quickly dying out with a rush of motor. The entire galaxy of stars flying with the little green car, which fact appeared to Mary as somewhat dizzying. "The entire world's rushing with us Wally," she said.

"Can anybody, including the stars, after seeing you once, ever let you go?" he asked.

"Do go on," she murmured drowsily, "I love to hear you talk. It's soothing. I love it. I could sleep."

"It's soothing. I love it. I could sleep," he mimicked. "Sit up and take your compliments like a lady. And I'm not, incidentally, telling you bed-time stories."

JONES WINS THE BRITISH OPEN GOLF TITLE

LOWEST 72 HOLE SCORE IN COMPETITION

RECORD BREAKING FIGURE WAS 285, SEVEN UNDER PAR

ST. ANDREWS' COURSE, A NOTABLY TRICKY OLD LINKS

St. Andrews, Scotland, July 15.—Bobby Jones today won the British Open Golf championship for the second successive year with the lowest 72-hole score ever set in a major tournament.

The record-breaking figure was 285, seven strokes under par for the tricky Saint Andrews' old course.

His total card for the three days of sensational golf follows:

68—72—73—72——285.

St. Andrews, Scotland, July 15.—(UP)—Bobby Jones, favored to retain his British Open Golf championship in the last driving 36 holes today, finished the morning round in 73 strokes and held the impressive total of 213.

Although his third round score was higher than the 68 of Wednesday and the 72 of yesterday, his golf delighted the huge gallery which followed him around St. Andrews' old course.

When he holed out on the 18th green he had completed 54 out of the 72 holes of the championship in six under par.

St. Andrews, Scotland, July 15.—Bobby Jones set out on the final eighteen holes in defense of his British Open Golf championship today with a four-stroke advantage over his nearest competitor and the likelihood that he might set a new low score record.

Bobby had completed 54 holes in a total of 213 strokes, six under par for the ever-difficult St. Andrews' old course.

Should Jones return a 77 or lower in the fourth and last round he would break the record low score of 291 held by himself and James Braid for the British Open. Braid set that mark in 1908 at Prestwick and Jones tied it at Lytham and St. Anne's last year.

Trailing the Atlanta youth as the field left the tee for the driving finish, the strain of which has broken many a champion, was Fred Robson, British professional whose brilliant 69 of the morning had given him an aggregate of 217.

Aubrey Boomer, British professional, and Joe Kirkwood, American professional, were next in line with 219.

Jones continued his pace-making as he started out in the afternoon followed by one of the largest galleries ever to watch a golf championship in the country.

He took 37 strokes, one over par to the turn.

JACK SHARKEY TO TAKE DAY OFF IN TRAINING

New York, July 15.—(UP)—Jack Sharkey will take a day off in his training for his bout with Dempsey, today, and rest from the grind which the heat wave here has made strenuous. It was understood that his sparring partners had been told to be ready to go to Pompton Lake, N. J., on short notice and many thought that Sharkey would yield to the advise of some of the boxing veterans and get out of the city for his training.

Saratoga Springs, N. Y., July 15.—(UP)—Jack Dempsey was looking better tday to his handlers and followers here following yesterday's short workout in which from time to time he showed a lot of the steam of the old time Dempsey. He boxed four rounds yesterday and did considerable work with the pulleys, weights and bags.

Yesterday's hero — Fred Leach, clean-up batter for the struggling Phillies, who had a perfect batting average for the day with a home run, two doubles and one single in four times up. Leach scored two runs himself and drove in three others, enabling the Phillies to break the Cardinals' winning streak with a 7 to 3 defeat.

The Chicago Cubs held their slim lead in the National League race by upsetting the Boston Braves, 6 to 1. Bob Osborn, pitching for the Cubs, gave the Braves only seven hits and held them scoreless until the ninth inning.

The Pittsburgh Pirates, meanwhile hung close on the heels of the Cubs by defeating Brooklyn, 6 to 5. Kiki Cuyler's hit in the ninth, scoring Paul Waner, decided the issue.

Cleveland's Indians broke their eight-game losing spell by turning back the league-leading Yankees, 4 to 1. Walter Miller, pitching for the Tribe, allowed 10 hits but kept them well scattered. In the fifth inning he struck out both Ruth and Gehrig. Neither Ruth nor Gehrig got a hit during the day.

The St. Louis Browns bunched their five hits to advantage and scored four runs, defeating the Red Sox, 4 to 2.

New York's Giants took the short end of the score in both games of a double-header with the Cincinnati Reds. The scores were 8 to 6 and 8 to 3. It was a big day for home runs, Critz getting two and Jackson, Walker, Pipp and Bressler getting one each.

Rain washed out the other scheduled games.

Kansas City, Mo.—Columbus took the concluding and odd game of the series with Kansas City here, 10 to 2. The game was slow in opening frames but wound up in a blaze of base hits which knocked two Blue pitchers from the park and left another tottering at the end of the game. The Senators tallied 15 hits, Kansas City 6.

Minneapolis, Minn. — Emmer's homer in the eighth, when the score was tied 6 to 6, gave Minneapolis a 7 to 6 win over Indianapolis, in the sixth and last contest of the series. Hubbell, who relieved Malone in the second, tightened and held the visitors to four scattered hits.

St. Paul, Minn.—Louisville made it one out of a series of six by taking the last game from St. Paul, 4 to 3, after a ten inning game. Beall, hurling for the locals, retired eight, but walked nine and hit another.

Milwaukee, Wis.—Toledo's 9 to 1 victory over Milwaukee gave the Hens a four game lead in the league standing here. Pamero won his 7th straight game, while Jonnard was touched for 11 hits in six innings.

JONES WINS THE BRITISH OPEN GOLF TITLE

LOWEST 72 HOLE SCORE IN COMPETITION

ST. ANDREWS' COURSE, A NOTABLY TRICKY OLD LINKS

St. Andrews, Scotland, July 15.—Bobby Jones today won the British Open Golf championship for the second successive year with the lowest 72-hole score ever set in a major tournament.

The record-breaking figure was 285, seven strokes under par for the tricky Saint Andrews' old course.

His total card for the three days of sensational golf follows:

68—72—73—72——285.

St. Andrews, Scotland, July 15.—(UP)—Bobby Jones, favored to retain his British Open Golf championship in the last driving 36 holes today, finished the morning round in 73 strokes and held the impressive total of 213.

Although his third round score was higher than the 68 of Wednesday and the 72 of yesterday, his golf delighted the huge gallery which followed him around St. Andrews' old course.

When he holed out on the 18th green he had completed 54 out of the 72 holes of the championship in six under par.

St. Andrews, Scotland, July 15.—Bobby Jones set out on the final eighteen holes in defense of his British Open Golf championship today with a four-stroke advantage over his nearest competitor and the likelihood that he might set a new low score record.

Bobby had completed 54 holes in a total of 213 strokes, six under par for the ever-difficult St. Andrews' old course.

Should Jones return a 77 or lower in the fourth and last round he would break the record low score of 291 held by himself and James Braid for the British Open. Braid set that mark in 1908 at Prestwick and Jones tied it at Lytham and St. Anne's last year.

Trailing the Atlanta youth as the field left the tee for the driving finish, the strain of which has broken many a champion, was Fred Robson, British professional whose brilliant 69 of the morning had given him an aggregate of 217.

Aubrey Boomer, British professional, and Joe Kirkwood, American professional, were next in line with 219.

Jones continued his pace-making as he started out in the afternoon followed by one of the largest galleries ever to watch a golf championship in the country.

He took 37 strokes, one over par to the turn.

JACK SHARKEY TO TAKE DAY OFF IN TRAINING

New York, July 15.—(UP)—Jack Sharkey will take a day off in his training for his bout with Dempsey, today, and rest from the grind which the heat wave here has made strenuous. It was understood that his sparring partners had been told to be ready to go to Pompton Lake, N. J., on short notice and many thought that Sharkey would yield to the advise of some of the boxing veterans and get out of the city for his training.

Saratoga Springs, N. Y., July 15.—(UP)—Jack Dempsey was looking better tday to his handlers and followers here following yesterday's short workout in which from time to time he showed a lot of the steam of the old time Dempsey. He boxed four rounds yesterday and did considerable work with the pulleys, weights and bags.

MATTERS OF STATE WORRY WILL ROGERS

COWBOY MAYOR OF BEVERLY HILLS AND CABINET CONVENING

AWARDING OF PRIZE IN "FLIVVER MARATHON" ENGROSSES THEIR ATTENTION

Beverly Hills, July 15.—(UP)—Matters of state occupied the time of Will Rogers, cowboy mayor of Beverly Hills, and his distinguished cabinet yesterday.

The question to be decided concerned which of two contestants deserved a $500 prize from Rogers in his widely heralded "Flivver marathon," which started in Claremore, Okla., his home town, and ended in Beverly Hills.

When Rogers announced the race, Mr. and Mrs. John Collins started out in the "Spirit of Claremore," while Robert Kloehr and Ross Hutchins cranked up "The Claremore Spirit."

The race ended in Roger's back yard yesterday with both "Spirits" clattering to a standstill at approximately the same time.

Rogers, nonplussed but still the genial host, gave all four racers the key to the city and ordered Chief of Police Ben Turpin to make them comfortable in the city jail. Meanwhile he called a meeting of his cabinet.

Bebe Daniels, director of morals, Count Tolstoy, substituting for Charlie Chaplin as director of internal affairs, and Chief Turpin, sitting with Rogers as the cabinet, had before them the knotty problem of deciding which of the two flivvers pulled up before Rogers garage first.

"The joke appears to be on me," Rogers said. "That $500 offer for a non-stop Ford trip between the two points was an attempt at a pun. It looks as if I am out $500 and to make it worse, I will be forced to decide to whom to give the money."

American Farmer Wins by Use of Machinery

Twelve cents per day is the exact value of a man's labor in terms of horse power, according to figures worked out by Farm and Fireside.

"One good husky man can develop about one-tenth of a horse power," writes J. B. Davidson, former engineering expert. "With horse power at 15 cents an hour its value as a motor is about 1½ cents per hour.

"Human labor in the form of horse power is not worth much. Power and labor amount to from 40 to 80 per cent of the total cost of farm crops. The American farmer's use of power has given him a notable advantage over any other farmer in the world.

"In China a rice laborer gets 15 cents a day and feeds himself. A California farm laborer gets $5 to $6 a day and 'found.' Yet the California rice growers are each year exporting increasing amounts of rice to the Orient and underselling the yellow farmers. The Oriental labor is hand labor; the American is machine labor.

"Five Italian farm laborers with one horse get a farm production worth $45 per man. An Iowa farmer, with an average of four horses per man, gets a production of $595 per man.

"The possibilities of still larger results in American use of power are enormous. At present 18 or 19 hours of labor are consumed in producing the average acre of corn belt corn up to harvesting. Yet there are many farmers who spend only three or four hours to grow an acre of corn. Within ten years it will be possible for one man to take care of 160 acres of corn from plowing to harvest."

Too Many Eggs

Laysan, in the Hawaiian islands, is one of the most remarkable bird islands in the world. Birds of various species flock there yearly, among them being the albatross, which arrives the latter part of October and remains till the following August. The white albatross lays one egg, usually on the ground. The eggs vary in shape and coloration. Some are long—length 111.6 millimeters, width 62.5 millimeters—others short and very thick, in length about 100 millimeters, width 70 millimeters.

In color most of them are nearly white, with irregular patches and spots of brownish maroon at the larger end. Eggs of the albatross are said to be considered the finest of all for eating, and are said to be superior even to those of the domestic hens for this purpose.

Kissing Should Be Taught

Professor Nyropot of Copenhagen university is quoted as saying that kissing is a science and eventually will be taught in universities. Probably by some near-sighted old fellow with long whiskers. That certainly would take the poetry out of it.—Capper's Weekly.

Must Be Perfect

Emery wheels are made by mixing the proper proportion of emery in the cement of which the wheel is made. The cement must be thoroughly mixed and of the right degree of hardness to wear away with the emery, or the surface will soon become uneven.

MATTERS OF STATE WORRY WILL ROGERS

AWARDING OF PRIZE IN "FLIVVER MARATHON" ENGROSSES THEIR ATTENTION

Beverly Hills, July 15.—(UP) — Matters of state occupied the time of Will Rogers, cowboy mayor of Beverly Hills, and his distinguished cabinet yesterday.

The question to be decided concerned which of two contestants deserved a $500 prize from Rogers in his widely heralded "Flivver marathon," which started in Claremore, Okla., his home town, and ended in Beverly Hills.

When Rogers announced the race, Mr. and Mrs. John Collins started out in the "Spirit of Claremore," while Robert Kloehr and Ross Hutchins cranked up "The Claremore Spirit."

The race ended in Roger's back yard yesterday with both "Spirits" clattering to a standstill at approximately the same time.

Rogers, nonplussed but still the genial host, gave all four racers the key to the city and ordered Chief of Police Ben Turpin to make them comfortable in the city jail. Meanwhile he called a meeting of his cabinet.

Bebe Daniels, director of morals, Count Tolstoy, substituting for Charlie Chaplin as director of internal affairs, and Chief Turpin, sitting with Rogers as the cabinet, had before them the knotty problem of deciding which of the two flivvers pulled up before Rogers garage first.

"The joke appears to be on me," Rogers said. "That $500 offer for a non-stop Ford trip between the two points was an attempt at a pun. It looks as if I am out $500 and to make it worse, I will be forced to decide to whom to give the money."

American Farmer Wins by Use of Machinery

Twelve cents per day is the exact value of a man's labor in terms of horse power, according to figures worked out by Farm and Fireside.

"One good husky man can develop about one-tenth of a horse power," writes J. B. Davidson, former engineering expert. "With horse power at 15 cents an hour his value as a motor is about 1½ cents per hour.

"Human labor in the form of horse power is not worth much. Power and labor amount to from 40 to 80 per cent of the total cost of farm crops. The American farmer's use of power has given him a notable advantage over any other farmer in the world.

"In China a rice laborer gets 15 cents a day and feeds himself. A California farm laborer gets $5 to $6 a day and 'found.' Yet the California rice growers are each year exporting increasing amounts of rice to the Orient and underselling the yellow farmers. The Oriental labor is hand labor; the American is machine labor.

"Five Italian farm laborers with one horse get a farm production worth $45 per man. An Iowa farmer, with an average of four horses per man, gets a production of $595 per man.

"The possibilities of still larger results in American use of power are enormous. At present 18 or 19 hours of labor are consumed in producing the average acre of corn belt corn up to harvesting. Yet there are many farmers who spend only three or four hours to grow an acre of corn. Within ten years it will be possible for one man to take care of 160 acres of corn from plowing to harvest."

Too Many Eggs

Laysan, in the Hawaiian islands, is one of the most remarkable bird islands in the world. Birds of various species flock there yearly, among them being the albatross, which arrives the latter part of October and remains till the following August. The white albatross lays one egg, usually on the ground. The eggs vary in shape and coloration. Some are long—length 111.6 millimeters, width 62.5 millimeters—others short and very thick, in length about 100 millimeters, width 70 millimeters.

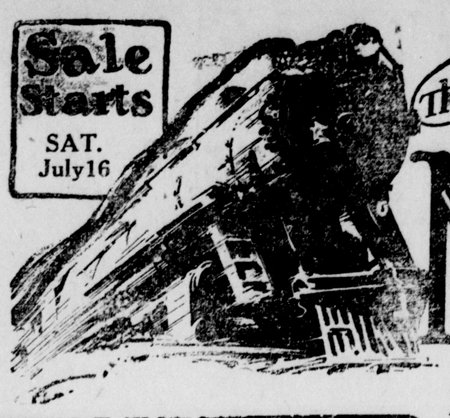

In color most of them are nearly white, with irregular patches and spots of brownish maroon at the larger end. Eggs of the albatross are said to be considered the finest of all for eating, and are said to be superior even to those of the domestic hens for this purpose.

Kissing Should Be Taught

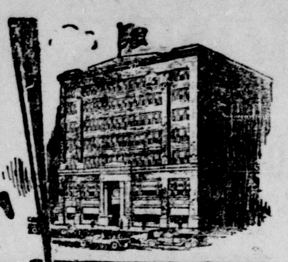

Professor Nyropot of Copenhagen university is quoted as saying that kissing is a science and eventually will be taught in universities. Probably by some near-sighted old fellow with long whiskers. That certainly would take the poetry out of it.—Capper's Weekly.

Must Be Perfect

Emery wheels are made by mixing the proper proportion of emery in the cement of which the wheel is made. The cement must be thoroughly mixed and of the right degree of hardness to wear away with the emery, or the surface will soon become uneven.

HIGHWAYS ARE GENERALLY GOOD

Heavy local rains have done some damage to highways in some portions of the state, but conditions generally are fully as good as a week ago, according to the condition report issued by the Minnesota Highway department today.

A new bridge over the Milwaukee tracks near Norwood was opened this week, eliminating the grade crossing and two sharp turns in the village, on T. H. Nos. 12 and 25. A new underpass taking traffic under the railroad near Montrose was opened on T. H. No. 10 this week.

High water in the Rainy river district, which has flooded portions of No. 11, is receding and this road is expected to be all passable soon unless water rises again.

Detailed reports follow, insofar as they refer to highways in the Brainerd Lake Region:

STEAL CHICKENS FOR EXCITEMENT

St. Paul Youths Fined in Municipal Court This Morning for Admitted Prank

FARMER REIMBURSED

Boys Believe Dead Chickens Tell no Tales But Evidence Sufficient

Six chickens perched on the rail of a fence at the Ed. Johnson farm in Emily township proved too much of a temptation for two St. Paul men the other evening and as a result Robert Lousson and Charles Clark were arraigned in municipal court this morning before Judge J. H. Warner charged with getting away with two chickens.

The men were returning at night from Crosby and admitted they were feeling "mighty good." When they saw the six chickens on the fence they decided to make some excitement. Stopping the car, the two crept stealthily upon the unsuspecting fowl. A flurry of feathers and two chickens were kidnaped, the other four escaping.

On reaching their cottage the young men realized their escapade was a misdemeanor in the eyes of the law and very guiltily they killed the chickens and buried them in the ground. They had previously contemplated a luscious meal.

Warrants were served on the two suspects who admitted their guilt. Lousson was fined $20 and costs and Charles Clark was fined $25 and costs. The farmer will be reimbursed for his loss.

Attorney Basil T. Heath represented the defendants while County Attorney W. F. Wieland acted for the state.

It was the first time the youths had ever been arraigned in court, they said.

LIONS CONGREGATE AT BREEZY POINT

Little Falls Members and Guests Feted by Local Club Wednesday Evening

ENTERTAINMENT ENJOYED

Visiting Club Shows Film on Reception of "Lindy" at Washington

That old popular song that includes the lines "The more we get together the happier are we," and "The more we eat together the fuller are we," was considered appropriate for the get together luncheon and entertainment Wednesday at Breezy Point Lodge when Brainerd Lions club feted their club brothers from Little Falls.

With all attempts at humor left aside, it can be truthfully stated that everyone of the 70 in attendance had "the time of their lives."

Just what was not conventional about the four in hands, bows, and other neck piece attractions of the Brainerd Lions club will never be known but there surely was something wrong for each and every one of the local club members was fined on that account. The money placed in a pot was drawn for by the Little Falls club with G. L. Hughes being the lucky Lion to garner in the harvest which consisted of sixteen cold dollars in two bit pieces, dimes, nickels and a sprinkling of pennies.

Captain "Billy" Fawcett of Breezy Point Lodge made the opening remarks, welcoming the Lions and also reviewing part of the plans in store for the entertainment of the Lions convention in 1928.

M. J. Kingston, Brainerd, entertained with a five minute humorous discussion which would cause envy in the hearts of the authors of the "Two Black Crows" impersonation.

Dr. G. I. Badeaux, Brainerd gave several song selections and was finally forced to plead for mercy to be excused after the audience repeatedly called for encores.

The Little Falls entertainment consisted of the showing of a 30 minute movie on the airplane trip of the delegation to Washington and New York to welcome their renowned citizen Col. Charles Lindbergh. The pictures showed the intrepid aviator as he was welcomed by the huge throngs at Washington and New York also scenes of Lindbergh as he piloted the "Spirit of St. Louis" in a series of head whirls, and other daredevil air performances.

Included in the assemblage were 26 Lions from Little Falls, 27 from Brainerd, 17 outside guests, including Harry Ross, of Scotland who is visiting D. H. Fullerton, Brainerd.

The twenty-six members of the Little Falls Lions club who were guests of the local club at Breezy Point Wednesday night included: A. I. Stone, L. H. Bastien, George Moeglein, Will Wilke, Rev. Paul J. Bockoven, Joseph Moeglein, E. A. Berg, J. S. Levis, Dr. C. Longley, Archie Olson, Oscar Rydquist, J. E. Viner, Steve Simonet, N. D. Woodworth, George L. Johnson, O. A. Haatveldt, Rev. Donald C. Smith, Harry Meyers, Harry Smoots, Dr. W. H. K. Moyer, Dr. E. W. Follendorf, A. E. Lovdahl, Kenneth Martin, Charles Sylvester, Edward J. Porten, and George L. Hughes.

HIGHWAYS ARE GENERALLY GOOD

Heavy local rains have done some damage to highways in some portions of the state, but conditions generally are fully as good as a week ago, according to the condition report issued by the Minnesota Highway department today.

A new bridge over the Milwaukee tracks near Norwood was opened this week, eliminating the grade crossing and two sharp turns in the village, on T. H. Nos. 12 and 25. A new underpass taking traffic under the railroad near Montrose was opened on T. H. No. 10 this week.

High water in the Rainy river district, which has flooded portions of No. 11, is receding and this road is expected to be all passable soon unless water rises again.

Detailed reports follow, insofar as they refer to highways in the Brainerd Lake Region:

T. H. No. 2 — Duluth, Brainerd, Wadena, Detroit Lakes and Moorhead—260 miles—Duluth, paved—Carlton, good—Cromwell, fair—McGregor, good, fair—Aitkin, good—Brainerd, good— Wadena, fair, detour, fair—Detroit Lakes, fair—Hawley, detour, fair—Moorhead.

STEAL CHICKENS FOR EXCITEMENT

St. Paul Youths Fined in Municipal Court This Morning for Admitted Prank

FARMER REIMBURSED

Boys Believe Dead Chickens Tell no Tales But Evidence Sufficient

Six chickens perched on the rail of a fence at the Ed. Johnson farm in Emily township proved too much of a temptation for two St. Paul men the other evening and as a result Robert Lousson and Charles Clark were arraigned in municipal court this morning before Judge J. H. Warner charged with getting away with two chickens.

The men were returning at night from Crosby and admitted they were feeling "mighty good." When they saw the six chickens on the fence they decided to make some excitement. Stopping the car, the two crept stealthily upon the unsuspecting fowl. A flurry of feathers and two chickens were kidnaped, the other four escaping.

On reaching their cottage the young men realized their escapade was a misdemeanor in the eyes of the law and very guiltily they killed the chickens and buried them in the ground. They had previously contemplated a luscious meal.

Warrants were served on the two suspects who admitted their guilt. Lousson was fined $20 and costs and Charles Clark was fined $25 and costs. The farmer will be reimbursed for his loss

Attorney Basil T. Heath represented the defendants while County Attorney W. F. Wieland acted for the state.

It was the first time the youths had ever been arraigned in court, they said.

LIONS CONGREGATE AT BREEZY POINT

Little Falls Members and Guests Feted by Local Club Wednesday Evening

ENTERTAINMENT ENJOYED

Visiting Club Shows Film on Reception of "Lindy" at Washington

That old popular song that includes the lines "The more we get together the happier are we," and "The more we eat together the fuller are we," was considered appropriate for the get together luncheon and entertainment Wednesday at Breezy Point Lodge when Brainerd Lions club feted their club brothers from Little Falls.

With all attempts at humor left aside, it can be truthfully stated that everyone of the 70 in attendance had "the time of their lives."

Just what was not conventional about the four in hands, bows, and other neck piece attractions of the Brainerd Lions club will never be known but there surely was something wrong for each and every one of the local club members was fined on that account. The money placed in a pot was drawn for by the Little Falls club with G. L. Hughes being the lucky Lion to garner in the harvest which consisted of sixteen cold dollars in two bit pieces, dimes, nickels and a sprinkling of pennies.

Captain "Billy" Fawcett of Breezy Point Lodge made the opening remarks, welcoming the Lions and also reviewing part of the plans in store for the entertainment of the Lions convention in 1928.

M. J. Kingston, Brainerd, entertained with a five minute humorous discussion which would cause envy in the hearts of the authors of the "Two Black Crows" impersonation.

Dr. G. I. Badeaux, Brainerd gave several song selections and was finally forced to plead for mercy to be excused after the audience repeatedly called for encores.

The Little Falls entertainment consisted of the showing of a 30 minute movie on the airplane trip of the delegation to Washington and New York to welcome their renowned citizen Col. Charles Lindbergh. The pictures showed the intrepid aviator as he was welcomed by the huge throngs at Washington and New York also scenes of Lindbergh as he piloted the "Spirit of St. Louis" in a series of head whirls, and other daredevil air performances.

Included in the assemblage were 26 Lions from Little Falls, 27 from Brainerd, 17 outside guests, including Harry Ross, of Scotland who is visiting D. H. Fullerton, Brainerd.

The twenty-six members of the Little Falls Lions club who were guests of the local club at Breezy Point Wednesday night included: A. I. Stone, L. H. Bastien, George Moeglein, Will Wilke, Rev. Paul J. Boekoven, Joseph Moeglein, E. A. Berg, J. S. Levis, Dr. C. Longley, Archie Olson, Oscar Rydquist, J. E. Viner, Steve Simonet, N. D. Woodworth, George L. Johnson, O. A. Haatveldt, Rev. Donald C. Smith, Harry Meyers, Harry Smoots, Dr. W. H. K. Moyer, Dr. E. W. Follendorf, A. E. Lovdahl, Kenneth Martin, Charles Sylvester, Edward J. Porten, and George L. Hughes.

NEW YORK ENTERS 4TH DAY OF REAL HEAT

LITTLE SIGN OF A LET-UP IN TORRID TEMPERATURE

PROSTRATIONS INCREASED AS CUMULATIVE EFFECT OF HEAT INCREASES

(By United Press)

The heat which has been general over the east since Tuesday had claimed more than 100 lives today through fatal prostrations, drownings and other accidents due to the extreme temperature. Approximately 75 of the deaths were attributed directly to the heat.

The wave had been broken in the middle west and in sections along the western fringe of the Atlantic seaboard, but no definite promise of relief could be held out today for the Atlantic states.

Showers brought temporary relief in New York and elsewhere, with more rain possible today, but the respite was only temporary.

High temperatures yesterday included 96 at Washington, D. C., and Baltimore, Md., 94 at Boston; 92 at Philadelphia and Albany; 91 in New York; 89 in Cleveland and 88 in Pittsburgh.

Chicago, however, was comfortable with a maximum of 74. It was only 76 in Buffalo and 78 in Portland, Me.

The most comfortable section of the continent was the Pacific coast where San Francisco had a maximum of 62 and a minimum of 54, and Los Angeles reported a maximum of 76 and a minimum of 56.

A tabulation of deaths to date follows:

New York and nearby New Jersey, 31; Pennsylvania, 19; Ohio, 14; Chicago, 10; New York state (outside city), 11; New England, 8, Washington, D. C., 2; Baltimore, 3; Detroit, 2; West Virginia, 5.

Total—105.

New York, July 15.—(UP)—New York entered its fourth day of extreme heat today with little sign of a let-up.

Eleven more deaths yesterday attributed directly to the heat and drownings brought the total dead for the metropolitan area to 31 since Tuesday.

Prostrations increased as the cumulative effect of the heat was felt.

Twenty deaths of the total were attributed directly to the heat.

A heavy shower around midnight brought temporary relief but the day broke humid and hot.

Jeypore's Musical House

What is said to be one of the strangest houses in all the world is situated in the city of Jeypore, India. Besides its peculiar architectural appearance, it boasts of being a huge musical instrument. When the wind is blowing in certain directions it produces beautiful notes said to remind one of the human voice. For many years it was a mystery why this building should, from time to time, burst into sweet song. It finally fell to the lot of an American engineer to solve the mystery. He found that the material used in the structure was cork stone, a porous stone of very light weight. In fact, every niche in its exterior is a sort of pipe designed to draw in the passing current of air. The wind, playing upon the various openings, acts as if upon reeds.—Exchange.

Hard Metals

In one respect the diamond has always stood pre-eminent in the mineral world—that of hardness. Other substances have rivaled it in beauty and at least one, the ruby, outranks it in cost, but none in the whole list equals it in hardness.

Since the invention of the electric furnace, however, which is capable of producing a heat equal to 7,000 degrees F., at least two products have been prepared which have supplanted the diamond even in hardness.

Experimenters have succeeded in producing titanium in the electric furnace. In its pure form it is much harder than steel or quartz, and when combined with silicon, to form a silicide of titanium, or with boron, to form a boride of titanium, it surpasses the diamond itself in this quality.

Art of Whittling

At one period in the history of our country whittling reached a high point of development, and many interesting articles were turned out by sharp pocket knives, patience and love of the art. But in recent years the art has almost been forgotten. Now in many places throughout the United States this ancient art is being taught in public schools with the hope of reviving that profitable pastime. In an effort to make the art as popular as of yore regular whittling contests are held among schoolboys in Chicago. A great variety of articles is entered in these contests, including airplanes, boats of various types, miniature buildings and toys of all descriptions.—Pathfinder Magazine.

PROSTRATIONS INCREASED AS CUMULATIVE EFFECT OF HEAT INCREASES

(By United Press)

The heat which has been general over the east since Tuesday had claimed more than 100 lives today through fatal prostrations, drownings and other accidents due to the extreme temperature. Approximately 75 of the deaths were attributed directly to the heat.

The wave had been broken in the middle west and in sections along the western fringe of the Atlantic seaboard, but no definite promise of relief could be held out today for the Atlantic states.

Showers brought temporary relief in New York and elsewhere, with more rain possible today, but the respite was only temporary.

High temperatures yesterday included 96 at Washington, D. C., and Baltimore, Md., 94 at Boston; 92 at Philadelphia and Albany; 91 in New York; 89 in Cleveland and 88 in Pittsburgh.

Chicago, however, was comfortable with a maximum of 74. It was only 76 in Buffalo and 78 in Portland, Me.

The most comfortable section of the continent was the Pacific coast where San Francisco had a maximum of 62 and a minimum of 54, and Los Angeles reported a maximum of 76 and a minimum of 56.

A tabulation of deaths to date follows:

New York and nearby New Jersey, 31; Pennsylvania, 19; Ohio, 14; Chicago, 10; New York state (outside city), 11; New England, 8; Washington, D. C., 2; Baltimore, 3; Detroit, 2; West Virginia, 5.

Total—105.

New York, July 15.—(UP)—New York entered its fourth day of extreme heat today with little sign of a let-up.

Eleven more deaths yesterday attributed directly to the heat and drownings brought the total dead for the metropolitan area to 31 since Tuesday.

Prostrations increased as the cumulative effect of the heat was felt.

Twenty deaths of the total were attributed directly to the heat.

A heavy shower around midnight brought temporary relief but the day broke humid and hot.

Jeypore's Musical House

What is said to be one of the strangest houses in all the world is situated in the city of Jeypore, India. Besides its peculiar architectural appearance, it boasts of being a huge musical instrument. When the wind is blowing in certain directions it produces beautiful notes said to remind one of the human voice. For many years it was a mystery why this building should, from time to time, burst into sweet song. It finally fell to the lot of an American engineer to solve the mystery. He found that the material used in the structure was cork stone, a porous stone of very light weight. In fact, every niche in its exterior is a sort of pipe designed to draw in the passing current of air. The wind, playing upon the various openings, acts as if upon reeds.—Exchange.

Hard Metals

In one respect the diamond has always stood pre-eminent in the mineral world—that of hardness. Other substances have rivaled it in beauty and at least one, the ruby, outranks it in cost, but none in the whole list equals it in hardness.

Since the invention of the electric furnace, however, which is capable of producing a heat equal to 7,000 degrees F., at least two products have been prepared which have supplanted the diamond even in hardness.

Experimenters have succeeded in producing titanium in the electric furnace. In its pure form it is much harder than steel or quartz, and when combined with silicon, to form a silicide of titanium, or with boron, to form a boride of titanium, it surpasses the diamond itself in this quality.

Art of Whittling

At one period in the history of our country whittling reached a high point of development, and many interesting articles were turned out by sharp pocket knives, patience and love of the art. But in recent years the art has almost been forgotten. Now in many places throughout the United States this ancient art is being taught in public schools with the hope of reviving that profitable pastime. In an effort to make the art as popular as of yore regular whittling contests are held among schoolboys in Chicago. A great variety of articles is entered in these contests, including airplanes, boats of various types, miniature buildings and toys of all descriptions.—Pathfinder Magazine.

Texas Leads in Autos

What seven states in the Union have motor vehicle registrations exceeding the million figures? asks Capper's Weekly. Try this "ask me another" question on your friends and see how many will include Texas in the list. The 1926 auto statistics just published show that in point of revenue derived from registration fees Texas ranks in fourth place of the entire 48 states. Her income from this source totaled $14,372,883. Texas has more motor vehicles than all of New England put together.
